MONDAY 26 AUGUST 1996

Rantzen 'a threat to BBC integrity'

Senior colleague accuses star of sloppy and misleading journalism

ING MATTHEW HORSMAN admitted to being "hurt and shocked" by the article. nior BBC figures erupted yes-

In a detailed and powerful at-

The unseemly dispute be-tween two highly respected BBC journalists will cause immense embarrassment to the television presenter Esther corporation, especially as the argument centres on the crucial issue of journalistic standards.

There is mounting concern tack which sent shock waves among some journalists in the through the corporation, news and current affairs department of the BBC that a move towards mass populism in this kind of programme could dilute journalistic standards in parts of the organisation. The Rantzen Report is made by the features department.

Ms Kantzen immediately launched a powerful defence. The row went public when Mr Ware, who presents Rough Justice, wrote a lengthy article Writing in today's Independent, a "perversion of the truth, a in yesterday's Sunday Telegraph twisting of the facts". She also attacking an epsiode of The Rantzen Report, a 30-minute audience-based show which Ms

'I have been described as a tabloid journalist ... this is a label I am proud to wear' - Esther Rantzen writes exclusively for the Independent, page 3

week ago - highlighted the case of Ian Parker, a patient at the British Home and Hospital for Incurables in South London. It used comments from his mother and said that 28-yearold Ian, left brain-damaged by a childhood virus, lacked stimulation from staff and effectively gramme for using the spy cam-the programme had in fact to "expose" Mr Parker's alleged plight and sent in an inspent little time with the patient. He concludes: "The journalism in this programme wasn't just sloppy, the programme was misleading and fundamentally unfair." This "worst and brash-

was left to his own devices to

vegetate. The programme makers also used a hidden camera not only had Mr Parker not been neglected or ignored, he had been well-cared for by a hard-working and dedicated staff. He also criticises the proest kind of tabloid television journalism " was a threat to the BBC's integrity. Ms Rantzen said she only knew of tMr Ware's attack when she picked up her copy of Mr Ware, who knows anoththe paper. "I haven't stopped reeling since," she said. "What er patient at the home, investigated himself and reported that era when the home was willing to permit filming, and said the independent assessor used by bother to call me first." Mr Ware brushed aside the criticism, adding: "For me the real issue is the factual accuracy of her programme. The only pains me most is that he did not way to check the facts was not to go back to Esther - she's already had her say - but to the original source material." He admitted he had not sought permission from his employers to make the "personal views", but a BBC spokeswoman was un-able to say whether he could face disciplinary action. Meanwhile, the home's matron, Noelle Kelly, said it would be taking the programme to the Broadcasting Complaints Com-mission. "The programme was very misleading - and that is putting it very politely," she said. Senior broadcasters at the BBC were surprised at the vehemence of Mr Ware's attack, although most said they agreed with him. "It's true and everybody knows it," said a senior

John Ware: "It was the worst of tabloid TV journalism

However, free of the restraint

we should put up the state pension by restoring the link with

It was reported yesterday that a study at Hull University had found Mr Blair might have more hard-core rebels in government than John Major. Mr

Skinner and Ms Abbot were a report that John Prescott, deputy leader, and Mr Cook had forced Mr Blair to consid-withdraw the whip from rebels

A leadership source denied among the 30 identified.

Just another Bank Things ain't what they used to be on the Great British bank holiday. The days of a windy walk along the prom are fading fast. Revellers at the Reading Rock festival (left) partied under cloudy skies and indulged in the usual mbx of booze and balti from traders' stalls. Up the road in Newbury, environmental activists staged Things ain't what they used to be on the Great British bank holiday. The days of a windy walk along the prom are fading fast, at the controversial Newbury Bypass (above). And in London (right), remnants from the punk era held their own nihilistic alternative festival at the Brixton Academy, known as 'F Reading'. Stalls. Up the road in Newbury, environmental activists staged A whale of a time with presents great and small

For those facing the traditional Christmas and birthday dilemma of what to get the per-son who has everything, help is at hand in the form of Valerie the watervole - or perhaps something a little larger, such as Kev the killer whale.

For £15 a year you can adopt one of these endangered ani-rhinos can be 'adopted'

mals, read six-monthly reports on their progress and receive your own adoption certificate. The schemes are becoming big business for animal charities and this autumn are set to get even bigger as organisations cash in on the latest trendy idea for imaginative gifts. Tusk Force, which promotes conservation schemes in Britain and around the world, is to launch wild-animal and conservation adoption schemes for the first

There is plenty of scope for more exotic, larger beasts to "adopt". Tusk Force offers Boo the bear from Ontario, though, reflecting its size, the fee is a heftier £25. Care for the Wild has run a scheme for some time for elephants, tigers and more recently for chimps, raising tens of thousands of pounds for conservation. The director, Chris Jordan, said that with wildlife appeals dropping by more than 30 per cent since the the answer in the future. "We believe the way forward is to have a product to sell such as adoption packs, thus giving the customer an unusual present and at the same time being able to help wildlife."

introduction of the national lottery, adoption projects were

In Bath, the Whale and Dolphin Conservation Society estimates that nearly 40 per cent of its £1.5m annual income comes from supporters sponsoring dolphins and killer

The naturalist Sir David Attenborough said be supported increased fund-raising for animals, but was sceptical about how involved the adopter could feel with some species. "What are they supposed to do with whales - buy a bucket of krill to throw to it?"

The favourite adopted animals include (in no particular order, as there are no figures): Tigers, dolphins, whales, ele-

Labour battle plan reveals internal rift

we have won overwhelmingly

ANTHONY BEVINS Political Editor

Battle lines for Labour warfare up to and beyond the next election were drawn by the party machine at the weekend, with publication of manifestos by candidates for the party's national executive. It was an embarrassingly public display of Labour's continuing left-right divide. With leadership sources retreating from threats to discipline left-wing rebels under a Labour government, and an as Prime Minister, Tony Blair might have to cope with up to 30 hard-core dissidents in the Commons, party tensions are being aggravated by this year's ballot for the executive.

The contest is exposing the raw policy conflict between old and New Labour, with demands for the renationalisation of water, gas, and electricity, £3bn extra in tax to be taken from those earning more than £50,000 and the repeal of Tory union laws.

Left-wing calls for socialist action are included in the manifestos of six of the 20 candidates for the seven-strong constituency Labour party section of the executive; a political beauty contest won last year by Robin Cook, shadow Foreign Secretary.

The ballot papers now going out to all party members pro-vide a unique platform for the left, with each candidate allowed up to 300 words of unreconstructed, Old Labour socialism.

A Labour leadership spokesman said dismissively erament to help most those whom the Tories have hurt worst"; and Mr Blunkett last night: "Every time the New promises to "eliminate the £3bn Labour case has been put to a backlog of repairs and mainteballot of the party membership, nance in our schools".

of frontbench responsibility, Mr Skinner, Ms Abbot and their col-But two of the socialist candidates were elected to the seven-strong constituency section of the NEC last year - Dennis Skinner and Diane Abbot. leagues let loose with the untrammelled socialism that will provide ammunition for more Tory "New Labour, New Dan-This year, they stand every ger advertisements.
Mr Skinner says: "We need to campaign for full-employment policies and public own-

David Blumkett: £3bn promise chance of re-election, along with Mr Cook, Gordon Brown, the shadow Chancellor, David Blunkett, education spokesman, Harriet Harman, social security spokeswoman, and Mo Mowlam, Northern Ireland spokeswoman. While the mainstream candidates' manifestos generally tread a careful, New Labour line, the appeal for votes coaxes Mr Brown into a call for "unifying socialist values"; Mr Cook er backing down from threats to says he will urge "a Labour gov-

Lilley accused

Peter Lilley, the Secretary of State for Social Security, and the head of the Government's Benefits Agency yesterday faced a call for their resignation as they were accused of misleading Parliament.

Crisis in the RUC The new Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary will inherit a force which is facing a policing crisis.

Lewis's bad timing Chris Lewis was dropped from the England squad for the Texaco Trophy one-day interna tionals after arriving late for the fourth day of the Test against Sports section

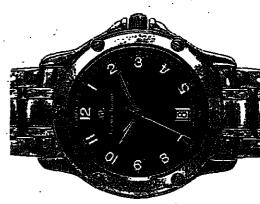

Section 1 BUSINESS & CITY 15 ership; maintain and improve universal welfare benefits and COMMENT 11-13 CROSSWORD 16 pensions; repeal VAT on domestic fuel; repeal trade union laws; impose a minimum wage; phase out private beds in the NHS and kick out the Tory spivs LEADING ARTICLES 11 LETTERS11 who run the trusts..."

Ms Abbot says: "I am op-OBITUARIES14 SCIENCE 16 posed to the [shadow Chancel-Section 2 lor's) proposal to cut child benefit for children once 16, and

DO WE NEED? 8,16 EDINBURGH18 FAMILY LIFE 6,7 LISTINGS 20,21 NETWORK9-14 TV & RADIO 23,24

G·O·L·D·S·M·I·T·H·S WALKER&HALL

Maurice Lacroix Swiss Watches, are available at selected branches of the Goldsmiths Group, one of the country's leading retail jewellers with over a 100 branches nationwide.

For details of your nearest stockist call FREE on 0800 220733

MPs 'misled' over benefit hotline

NICHOLAS TIMMINS Public Policy Editor

Peter Lilley, the Secretary of State for Social Security, and the head of the Government's Benelits Agency yesterday faced a call for their resignation as they were accused of misleading Parliament over a decision to close down the benefit system's emergency hotline.

The out-of-hours service, which provides emergency cash for claimants hit by disaster at weekends and nights, was described as "the last crucial brick

Stricken

Japanese

tuna ship

restarted

Engineers from sister ships in the Japanese Atlantic tuna fleet aided by Irish naval officers vesterday succeeded in restarting the engines of the stricken vessel, the Taisei Maru, on which five crew members died in a gas

In the continuing standoff position 200 miles off Galway, ready to challenge any of the estimated 40 Japanese ships attempting to retrieve long-line equipment left illegally in Irish

Maru on Friday and Saturday were hampered by heavy seas, although the surviving crew managed to ventilate the ship's engine room, where freon re-frigeration gas had leaked. Freon turns into a deadly nerve gas

Yesterday morning, three

Japanese engineers from other tuna ships, along with Irish of-electrical cables from the Irish

Aisling, on to the Taisei Manu, enabling them to recharge the ship's batteries and restart its engines and navigation gear. Captain Liam Donaldson of the Aisling said isolated pockets of freon were detected in the engine room, but at safe levels.

Three Irish officers with emergency breathing apparatus have remained on board while the vessel is brought to Cork

The fishing master, chief engineer, cook, botswain and chief oiler all died in Friday's accident. Their bodies will be taken off the Taisei Maru in Cork

ly stored at -50 degrees C.

BE THE BEST

for return to Japan.

t is due this afternoon.

surfaces.

Efforts to rescue the Taisei

ALAN MURDOCH

leak on Friday.

in the wall of the welfare state" by Simon Hughes, the Liberal Democrat MP, who said it had helped 50,000 people in "dire fi-nancial circumstances" last year. According to Mr Hughes, a letter on 14 March to staff from Peter Mathison, the Benefits Agency's chief executive, shows that a decision to close the service had been agreed on 12 March by the Benefits

Agency's management team. The letter, leaked to the Bermondsey MP in whose constituency the service's headquarters is based, states that "the

be carried out after the date specified and are therefore not funded ... provision of out-ofhours service (including that provided by the London Emergency Office) - 1 October 1996." But in Parliamentary written answers given weeks later, dated 25 April and 22 May, Mr Mathison told MPs that the future of the service "is currently being examined" and a decision was expected "later this year". That, Mr Hughes said, appeared to be "a lie" and Parliament had twice been misled -a of State must carry the can.

following items of work must not sin which MPs regard as unforgivable as it breaches the trust between members of Parliament, ministers and civil servants.

Mr Mathison's answers were given after the original questions about the service had been redirected to him by Mr Lilley. The letters were published as a formal reply by Roger Evans, the junior social security minister. Unless someone proved otherwise, Mr Hughes said, "on the face of it a lie has been told, and either Mr Mathison, or a minister, or the Secretary sion. Mr Mathison has misled Parliament and either he goes, and is sacked by the Secretary of State, or the Secretary of State or his minister goes because they have to take responsibility."

The issue could not be allowed to slip away with the agency saying it was a matter for ministers, and ministers saying it was for the agency, Mr Hughes said. The issue, along with the conflict between the Home Secretary, Michael Howard, and the Prisons Agency over last week's decision

"There can't be any confu- to release prisoners, illustrated the "marked difficulties over accountability" which civil service agencies have created.

Despite the 14 March letter and Mr Hughes's attack, both the Benefits Agency and the Department of Social Security insisted yesterday that "no final decision" has been taken on whether to close the out-ofhours service from October. The agency said the service was under review and "a decision is expected within the next month". Mr Mathison would not be resigning, a spokesman added.

SIGNIFICANT SHORTS

Cowboy wheelclampers will be regulated by a Labour Government, Labour's home affairs spokesman, Jack Straw, said last night. Since publishing a consultation paper in 1993, the Government has taken no action on the clampers, who are able to hold motorists to ransom if they park on private land. However, Mr Straw said Labour would introduce statutory regulation as part of plans to curb the private security industry. He said it was intolerable that clampers, who are able to hold motorists to ransom if they park on private land, had threatened to hold a woman's three-year-able depolation as superty while the collected a fell regulty. old daughter as surety while she collected a £60 penalty from a bank and that a hearse should be clamped outside a church, with the corpse still in the back. "Everybody, apart from the cowboys and the Tory party, wants these rogue clampers regulated." Anthony Bevins egal observers monitoring an anti-road protest in Brighton the weekend have criticised the police for their "heavy-handed" tactics. Violence erupted when police foiled the protesters from the Reclaim the Streets pressure group by seizing sound equipment and scaffolding. Officers in riol gear arrested 80 people – including two of the observers. – and 49 now face charges.

Colin Chalmers, of the Brighton Legal Defence and Monitoring Group, an organisation set up to advise demonstrators, said he was appalled at the tactics. "We are there to help people who get arrested. I don't know why they arrested us. They said it was on charges of conspiracy to cause a nuisance and obstruct the highway. Their actions were totally heavy-handed." A spokesman for Sussex police was not available for comment. Matthew Brace

Cycle logical warfare, page 12

Holidaymakers will face long delays today as they head back from their short breaks after the Bank Holiday and can expect severe disruption tomorrow due to rail strikes. AA Roadwatch warned motorists to stagger their journeys home to prevent long traffic jams clogging the motorway network.

The exodus to the coast on Friday saw lengthy delays on all major routes to holiday destinations and tomorrow's threatened rail strike will bring little comfort to those heading back to work after the holiday.

Poor weather blighted the weekend as rain swept many areas and winds lowered temperatures. Matthew Brace

Pritain's double Paralympic gold medal winner Noel Thatcher, yesterday called off his bid to win a third at the Atlanta games. The partially-sighted athlete, who won the 5,000 and 10,000 metres titles despite a stress fracture in his leg, had to pull out of the marathon after doctors warned him that his bones could shatter on the sharp hills. He said "I listened to the doctor and he told me about the risks, and I had a lot of thinking to do before deciding."

Special sanctuaries may soon be set up for dumped pet terrapins, which are posing problems for Britain's native wildlife with their powerful bite. A country-wide survey is under way to collect information about the apparently increasing number and distribution of abandoned water tortoises. Small terrapins have long been favourite pels but interest in them was hugely boosted during the craze for Teenage Mutant Hero Turtles back in the early 1990s. Environmentalists are now exploring ways of humanely capturing and caring for reptiles whose disenchanted former owners have illegally released them

Aman was recovering in hospital after sinking up to his neck in shifting sands during an 11-hour ordeal. Terry Howlett, 29, of Darlington, Co Durham, was close to being submerged in the sea at Morecambe Bay, Lancashire, when he was eventually pulled to safety, coastguards said.

He had been for a walk on the sands at at 10mm on Saturday when he became stuck in mud up to his knees. nicked and sank deeper and deeper overnight un the mud reached his waist," a coastguard spokesman said.

Acoffee-stained piece of paper containing Paul McCartney's hand-written lyrics for the classic Beatles track "With A Little Help From My Friends" is set to fetch up to £80,000 at an auction next month. The piece of musical history has emerged from a private collection nearly 30 years after McCartney first wrote it for inclusion in the 1967 album, Sergeant Pepper's. "What would you do if I sang out of tune," wrote McCartney, adding "Would you throw a tomato at me?" He later substituted the line: "Would you stand up and walk out on me?"

Seven winners each scooped more than £1m in the National Lottery draw. They shared a jackpot of £7,665,700, winning £1,095,100 each. The winning numbers were 8, 11, 14, 18, 33 and 44, and the bonus ball was 34.

THE INDEPENDENT ABROAD

Canadias Pol300 Madesta . . . Esc325 East, America, Africa and India) £184,08; Zone 2 (Far

Denmark Dkr18 Norwey Nkr20 cheque payable to Johnsons International Media Services

Greece Dr450 Switzerland . Sb4.00 Back issues of the independent are available from:

Lizzembourg ...,LF60 USA.......$3.00 Historic Newspapers, telephone 01988 840370.

UVERSEAS SUBSCRIPTIONS

BACK ISSUES

AustraSch40 MTends FIS.00

Germany DM4.5 Sweden. Skr21

Crimdon Dean beach at Peterlee, Co Durham, where a baby was found buried in the sand at the weekend

Anger over 'tainted' tobacco funds

NICHOLAS TIMMINS Public Policy Editor

The Medical Research Council is to review its guidelines for ac- ed brain damage in conditions cepting outside money for research after it was fiercely son's disease. criticised yesterday for taking £147,000 of tobacco industry money to study the potential benefits of nicotine.

After safety tests, its gas-refrigerated hold will be repaired The cash has been accepted to protect the valuable fastover three years by the MRC's frozen catch, which is normal-I in Newcastle-upon-Tyne to- about it and there appear to the development of age-relatsuch as Alzheimer's and Parkin-

The "donation" from British American Tobacco (BAT) was accepted by the unit last year. But council members, who include Sir Kenneth Calman, the Government's Chief Medical Neurochemical Pathology Unit Officer, were not been told nicotine increases or decreases ey which some as "tainted" seriously damaging to the should have been accepted.

The decision to take the cash was yesterday condemned as "unwise" and an "own goal", by Dr Sandy Macara, chairman of council of the British Medical Association. The Imperial Can- yesterday the cash had been ac- see a convention which govcer Research Fund said it was "surprised and disappointed" that the state-funded research council had accepted the cash.

Dr Macara noted that news of the donation followed the £1.6m which BAT has given for a chair of international relations at Cambridge University, and the detailing in yesterday's Observer newspaper of links be-tween overseas development bodies and the new chairman of BAT Industries, Lord Cairus. Dr the unit and head office staff, Macara said the industry was "desperately seeking re-spectability as it targets the next generation of smokers, and smokers in the developing world ... They are seeking to compromise the intellectuals, and especially where there's a medical element involved." Mary Rice, the MRC's head of public communications who is on holiday in France was quoted by The Sunday Times yes-

wards a £200,000 a year project have been bitter divisions with opposed acceptance of the think. The perception is itself a aimed establishing whether in the MRC over whether mon-money. "I thought it would be serious cause for concern." MRC's reputation as an im-

> Nick Winterton, the MRC's which states that outside funding must not influence the science, and that the work would anyway have been funded by the MRC if it had the cash. The BAT money was just one of "hundreds" of such outside sources of finance, although the only one currently involving tobacco money. The decision to take BAT's cash had been "a partial source of scientific knowledge. I put this in writing who had been satisfied the rules had been followed. Given the criticism, however, "we will be looking at how such future agreements might be pursued. We would be anxious to avoid any suggestion that the work itself could be in any way influenced by the source of funds. If people perceive that to be happening, even if it is not the case and we do not believe it to be the case here, then ob-

difficult one" debated between

Richard Peto, co-director of the ICRF and MRC Epider

ology Unit in Oxford and a leading specialist on the health effects of smoking, said the habit claims 100.000 lives a administrative secretary, said year in the UK. "I would like to cepted under a clear framework erned the acceptance of such money, together with a ban on all tobacco promotion." The possible beneficial effects of nicotine should be investigated, he said, but preferably not with "tohacco industry money."

BAT was unavailable to comment on the research grant, but a spokesman for BAT Industries denied outright that BAT was seeking to buy influence. That idea was "preposterous".
The MRC said it had a for-mai policy of supplementing public cash with money from other sources "where this does not conflict with its mission" or "compromise the scientific integrity of the work". BAT's funding had been subject to strict conditions, the council said, including one that BAT may not make reference to the research findings without the MRC's written consent. It was "most unlikely" that would be terday as saying she had viously we would have to re- given, a spokesman said.

COULD YOU Being taught how to get the very best from yourself should be a good enough reason for anyone to want to be a part of the Territorial Army. But with an unrivalled sense of comradeship and the same rates of pay as a Soldier in the Army (plus an annual tax-free bonus of up to £900 if you put in enough time! you're almost spoilt for reasons why Call us on 0345 300 117 or fill in and return the coupon to find out more details of the Territorial Army and why we think you should really be

For more information about TA Specialist Units, post the coupon to: The Territorial Army, Freepost 4335, Bristol BS1 3YX or phone 0345 300 111 quoting

Minimum yearly commitment 2 workends and 2 weeks annual camp. You can leave at any time, but few people want to The TA is committed to being an Equal

Prison chief returns to face 'early release' crisis

CLARE GARNER and ANTHONY BEVINS

Richard Tilt, director general of the Prison Service, yesterday Italy with his wife Kate, decidcut short his holiday in Italy because of the growing pressure over the "early release" crisis. But Labour home affairs spokesman Jack Straw last night warned the Home Secretary, if there is a court case." Michael Howard, against any temptation he might feel to use own failings.

version of events is accepted," Mr Straw said, "the Home Of- roll, Mr Tilt told the Mail on fice was told of the release of prisoners on Wednesday night. of quitting over the fiasco. "It stood back for two days and let prisoners walk free. Therefore any attempt to scapegoat Richard Tilt will be seen by the public as a classic

Michael Howard tactic to pass the buck when things go wrong. The mismanagement follows directly from the farcical distinction between policy and op-

Howard never takes the blame." Mr Tilt, who had been on a walking holiday in northern ed to return early because of the confirmed that Mr Tilt knew "difficult" week ahead. A vice said: "He feels it is going to be a difficult week, especially Mr Tilt, who replaced the sacked Derck Lewis just four Mr Tilt as a scapegoat for his months ago, will be "back at his desk" today. As questions were "Even if Michael Howard's being raised about which of the top jail officials' heads would

Sunday that he had no intention spokesman for the Prison Ser-

There was speculation last night about whether Mr Tilt had ing his holiday three days early. He had told the Mail on Sunday that he did not intend to return immediately.

gestion that Mr Tilt had been forced to return. "Richard has from comedy through to farce."

decided to come back of his own accord. Perhaps he decided in the last 12 hours that it would be better to return." The Prison Service has already about the "early" releases, based on a new interpretation of time spent on remand, before they began on the 16 August, but said his number two, Alan Walker, found out only when he re-turned from his holiday last Wednesday. Mr Walker, who has been acting jail chief since Mr Tilt went on holiday last Thursday, suggested he could step down if an inquiry found he had been "personally culpable".

A total of 80 prisoners were released from jails before Mr Howard ordered a balt. He has been pressured into abandon- ordered a full report into the

Harry Fletcher, assistant general secretary of the National Association of Probation Offi-But the Prison Service cers, said: "This has become the spokesman dismissed any sug-most extraordinary situation in recent penal history. It's gone

Use this voucher to try our 12-page Summer of Sport pull-out this Wednesday

THE INDEPENDENT for only 10p on Wednesday

To the Reader: Hand this voucher to the newsagent with a copy of The independent on Wednesdov 28 August 1996 and pay only 10p (Home delivery customers have until 25 September 1996 to present this vousher to your newsage If you have any problems redeeming your voucher, please call freephone

To the Hetalier: Please accept this voucher as part payment for The Independent on Wednesday 28 August 1996, (reader pays 10p). To receive your normal terms plus a 2p handling lee, please provide your wholesaler's name and your box no, and return the completed voucher to your wholesaler by 25 September 1996. This voucher is not to be used in conjunction with any other cities - it is valid

To the Wisdesaler: Please crodil the returning retailer with 32p (ROI 37p). Tres Products: 2p Retailer Hereting Allowence per vouchst. Its receive your credit togaliher with the wholesaler handling allowance, please send to Moucher Redemption Ltd. 17 Orion Court, Cranes Farm Rd, Basildon, Easer S$14 3DB.

	4 carbon (2014 (200),
Reader's name	31 Hd G 101 FC) 4400 4000 10 10
Reader's name		ı
		ļ
	- 11 JULY SE THE BY IN THE STREET EN SE	H

Brickbats,

bouquets

and first lady of

means accessible and populist

The Report came into being,

Ms Rantzen said recently, because viewers were still "writing down their stories to see if

However, the three-episode series - the BBC was unable to say yesterday whether there are plans for more - has already

Evening Standard wrote a vitrithe episode to the Broadcasting Complaints Commssion. A doctor who claimed the condition is treatable with anti-depressants said he had never encountered such "aggression and refusal to listen" from a studio

Yet strengthened by a 30-year career in the media, Ms

olioc review and sent a copy of

After the first 30-minute show on ME, or "yuppie flu", the TV critic of the London televsion.

I can help".

audience.

attracted criticism.

MICHAEL STREETER

The demise of That's Life had seemed to signal the end of Esther Rantzen's TV life. After 21 years as its presenter, and after attracting a peak of 18 million viewers, when the BBC pulled the plng two years ago. Ms Rantzen was so closely identified with the programme that she seemed destined to slip self to come up with a discussion show, Esther, a sort of British version of the Oprah

Winfrey format, and is now the presenter of The Rantzen Report.

If That's Life was sensation-

Instead, she re-invented her-into relative obscurity.

news

ONLY TO VOTE IN

lays today is the iks after the Buil m tomorrow due to notorists to stagen fic jams chopping the w lengths delinear

ens and temperature contion to the as rum swept man

Authew Bra. . al and humorous in the way of a downmarket tabloid, then aedal winner 🗤 The Rantzen Report has a more id to win a dual g mid-market approach, comd athlete, who was bining "investigative" journaldat stress fracture is ism and unashamed emotion ithen after doctor tion the sharp lab : 10ld me abset th

sat up for diampsi delents for Berlind 😢 🗛 коныт эк. matten about the distribution of ins have lone been is bugely in steer one Turtles inch a now explores: "ator reptiles where ally released then

forc deciding from afriking my to: distant condensations. was classe to war , Láncashite, abia into said. ां भी जो निर्माण dip to he have Ser evernight and spokesman said containing Pad the choose it do nets" is set to both nh. The pice of te coffection near or inchroim as the ald you do if I said doubl you th .m. a line: "World we than Elm on the ed a jackpoi 4. winning manbab is ball was 34

4、司者与董昭等43人。 janas (114 fő 🎋 🖰 ALL BOOK STORY Light 10 Talliance engan began akan m^{ala}ki s man property of di ceri ata  Standard are all the se increase attribute to try our f Sport esday

DEN

1,000 of the property of the same of The party of them. The sales of the sales of $\frac{\partial B_{k+1}}{\partial x_{k+1}} = \frac{\partial B_{k+1}}{\partial x_{k+1}} = \frac{1}{2} \cos \left(\frac{1$

BBC insiders were insisting producer. last night that the corporation would continue to make further cost cuts and that the higher licence fee was still warranted to ensure quality programming in the digital age. During a session early yes-bitter attack on Ms Rantzen by her BBC colleague, John Ware. The debate about quality journalism was seen as crucial, in light of John Birt's call on Friday for a higher licence fee to the digital age. "If we are to ask for more money, we had better be sure we produce the kind of news and current affair program-

again during the festival's well -attended session on spin doctors featuring Donald Dewar. the Labour whip, and Liberal Democrat Charles Kennedy.

Mark Damazer of the BBC, agreed that the role of spin doctors created huge difficulties for the press, particularly in the lead -up to elections.

Journalists, including some from the floor, complained that senior ministers would too often decline to appear on major news programmes when they were likely to face hard questioning. But Mr Dewar defended the right of individual politicians and political parties generally to stay away from journalists: There are different interests on both sides, and we are each entitled to defend those interests."

There was also major concern among journalists that spin doctors too often attempted to interfere with the editorial process, by ringing incessantly to insist on changing the running order of news or to argue about the interpretation journalists had put on a story.

Phil Harding, head of the BBC's political unit, said: "If there are attempts at intimidation, they will be resisted." He added: "Politicians believe there is bias, but the public appears to believe there is far less bias, than it is to the public, to the ket its services better.

mately responsible." Preoccupations with "fresh influences* on television dominated the festival, with sessions dedicated to such issues as Dunblane and the growing dominance of BSkyB, the pay television company owned 40% by Rupert Murdoch, in the multi-channel market. Christine Mitchell, head of programming at General Cable, accused BSkyB of having a foot against our throats" through its dominant position as program-icy of "bundling" channels.

She repeated the cable industry's demand for more flexible pricing from BSkyB, and suggested that cable companies could have an advantage over satellite through their ability to market both telephony and cable television. "We need to have more flexible packages to

But David Elstein, head of programmes, disputed the claim that BSkyB was acting uncompetitively. "We will not do anything that hurts our own business, and no one would expect us to." he said, suggeting the cable industry might seek to marBy ESTHER RANTZEN

Arts, and the Special Judge's tailed and exhaustive research Award for Journalism from the by the production team. The Royal Television Society. These first part of any investigation awards have been gained dur- consists of a thorough examiing my 30 years of working on nation of the viewer's story – ploid" popular factual prohow well-founded is the complaint? Could it be a misungrammes, some of which have exposed difficult and sensitive subjects, such as child abuse, mental illness, the ethics of transplantation. In the light of the attack made against me, let me lay out the methods and principles guiding that work. Programmes such as That's derstanding, or a simple and excusable mistake, or simply one person's grudge? In which yes we drop it, no matter how much time and energy has alcase there is no story, no programme, the investigation ceasready been expended on the ines at this point. It would clearly vestigation. To broadcast would be unfair to pursue it. If, however, there appears to es we broadcast, including the be good factual grounds for the other side's response, and leavcomplaints, we then look furing our audience to decide the ers' letters. They gain their ther and wider - which of merits of the case. If the other course entails considerably side refuse to put their point of Newsman with a missionary's zeal clearly be unfair. In other cas-

Life and the Rantzen Report obtain their material from view-

Council in North London. He also helped uncover the West- of the truth, a twisting of the minster gerrymandering voting scandal

Four years ago he took over more research. Are there othview, we are left with no choice ers in the same predicament? but to broadcast, with the What view do experts take - do information that we had rethey support or destroy the quested a response, but been viewer's case? Having tested the denied one. strength of the original case as Every programme Mr Ware carefully as possible, we then attacks went through this contact the other side. Is there process. Everyone was invited sonable explanation they pear, but made a statement, we reported it. They knew the nature of the programme, and the purpose of it. We followed the BBC's guidelines for fairness and balance to the letter. not just because we have to, but because they are right, they are good practice and they protect the journalists and the journalists broadcasting on the BBC. The BBC's reputation is always at stake - so, it seems, is mine. I am, as I have said, well accustomed to being attacked. But to be attacked without being given any chance at all to defend myself, my production team, the participants in the programme, or the programme itself seems to me a perversion facts. Finally, if we do in spite of all our precautions, make a Smile please: Esther Rantzen poses as a tooth fairy for a publicity stunt. As well as her television work, she campaigned for children's rights

uets, which include the Dimbleby Award from the British Academy of Film and Television Arts (BAFTA).

After working as a TV researcher, Ms Rantzen's first profile role was as a reporter for Braden's Week in 1968 where she stayed for four years before pro-

strong reactions - some

ate. However, the attack on me in the Sunday Telegraph was unprecedented in my experience

I was accused of twisting facts, of perverting truth, of sloppy journalism. They were hostile, some affection-which was to shape her career. There was a frivolous, trivial streak running through the show, typified by appalling jokes, unfunny monologues and dogs which were persuaded to say "sausages".

Most mindless of all were those dreadful I'm-a-woman-of-Rantzen is as well used to the ducing and presenting That's the people street interviews in ple's rights, one of the brickbats as well as the bou- Life in 1973, the programme which she persuaded members rus of consumerism.

of the public to behave in peculiar ways.

However, despite its silly side, the show did capture the viewers' imagination as a TV David fighting against the corporate Goliaths. Ms Rantzen soon emerged as one of the first high-profile champions of people's rights, one of the early gu-

One of her achievements was to highlight the issue of children and organ transplants through the life of Ben Hardwick. She recently complained that no one would take up such issues now. "If Debbie Hardwick rang up today because her little boy, Ben, was dying of livwould put it on?" she asked.

Other programmes followed, including Childwatch and Drugwatch, as well as lighter

In time she became part of the consumer Establishment, becoming a member of the National Consumer Council and the Health Education Authority. In 1991, Ms Rantzen, mar-

Desmond Wilcox, was awarded the OBE for services to journalism.

Photograph: Steve Nicholson

important" part of her career was founding Childline, a free counselling service for children spite occasional financial diffi-

Exclusive: Why I'm proud to be a tabloid journalist any investigation I have ever mean unethical. Indeed, beno advance warning before it cause these programmes have was printed: I had no chance

I am used to provoking journalist If this means I make ed the truth, nor have I twistbecause, unlike the subject of ed the facts. "Tabloid" does not such a high profile and attract such large audiences, the jourwhatsoever to reply to the nalism must be especially rig-orous and thorough. That is why vesterday's accusations shocked and hurt me, especially coming from such a source.

very serious charges. Indeed, it was an extremely damaging attack. And the accusations came not from a critic, under the heading of a television review. They were written by a professional colleague in the BBC, Panorama reporter John Ware. Why is this significant? Because both Mr Ware and I in our television journalism must follow a code of practice established by the Director General of the BBC. They are the "Producer Guidelines". One crucial element in them, to ensure both accuracy and fairness, is the principle that anyone who is the subject of criticism must be contacted before the programme, and given enough time to provide a proper reply. I have been described, by Mr Ware and others, as a tabloid populist, accessible, programmes, it is a label I am proud to wear. I have made mistakes

-alas - but what journalist has not. But I have never pervert-

Mr Ware is a distinguished reporter. But I too have been honoured - with the Dimbleby Award from the British Academy of Film and Television

MICHAEL STREETER

If Esther Rantzen's journalism has always worked side-by-side with the entertainment business, her protagonist John Ware has worked mostly in the more rarefied atmosphere of TV current affairs documentaries. A reporter with BBC1's flagship Panorama for ten years, he has a reputation as a tough, unmissionary's zeal to get to the truth on hard issues. It was at Granada's World in Action 13 years ago that Ware won the first of his two Royal Television Society (RTS) home current news awards, for a devastating profile of Gerry Adams. The portrait of the Sinn Fein activist as a determined terrorist, plotting vio-lence in Northern Ireland and compromising journalist with a on the mainland was a shocking one, and one which the IRA gence and loyalist paramili-blamed for an attempt on taries in the Province. Adams's life.

Ware's interest in Ireland was first excited on a brief stint as a reporter in Belfast with The Sun newspaper before his move to television, and for many years it was his main interest. He received acclaim for a Panorama programme called "Dirty War", detailing the close links between British army intelli-

His second RTS award was for a report into the hard-left anti-racist "witch-hunts" on the then Labour-controlled Brent

as the presenter of BBC's can offer? If so, do we drop the their case. Everything they told story even at this very late us was taken into account in stage? Very often the answer is. preparing the story. When they refused to ap-mistake, we publish a cor-rection, and put the story

Edinburgh international television festival: Squabbles among senior journalists bring forum to life and threaten bid for higher licence fee

Former BBC executives slam 'bloated' institution

MATHEW HORSMAN Media Editor

dinburgh international television festival was enlivened yesterday by family squabbles within the ranks of senior BBC journalists, including Kate Ai-die, John Ware and Esther Rantzen.

Three former BBC executives added to the BBC's woes when they made swingeing artacks on an institution which they said they remained bloated and inefficient.

Nick Elliott, now at the ITV network centre, and Michael Atwell and Tim Gardam, now both at Channel 5, were taking part in a session entitled The BBC1 Left. Mr Atwell spoke of the idiosyncratic styles of Alan Yentob and Michael Jackson, now both senior executives in John Birt's newly-restructured BBC. The comments come at a delicate time, as the BBC has just launched a campaign to increase the licence fee.

edy, Colin Cameron, head of television at BBC Scotland, suggested that Ms Aidie's tone during her reporting had been inappropriate and forensic, and that in retrospect it had been part of what the BBC had done wrong. The comment was seized upon as a further sign of ten-sions between BBC Scotland and head office in London, and compounded the sense of internecine strife within the corporation suggested by the finance the BBC's transition to ming the licence fee-payer de-serves," said one BBC news

The issue was picked up The panel, which also in-terday focusing on the media's cluded senior journalists coverage of the Dunblane trag-Michael Brunson of ITN and me supplier to cable and its pol-

give our customers what they want," she said.

Tests of endurance: John Birt went on and on, and Laurence Marks went out, apparently. David Elstein charmed Memories of the night with Birt

Plenty of column centimetres were dedicated to John Birt's keynote address at the festival, when he launched his campaign for a higher licence fee. Hacks, mercifully, were given succinct briefings beforehand, saving themselves the trouble of wading through a long and rambling speech to find the kernel of something truly new. Some disgruntled attendees were less than charitable as they left McEwan Hall, muttering about the hard seats and the interminable Mr is the only one on his way to work. Birt. Memorably, Andrea Won-

BSkyB, found himself in enemy territory, surrounded by opera- Elstein, one of the British erutors who don't like BSkyB's stranglehold on the pay television market. He performed suavely and convincingly as always, and even made a few friends by confiding that his boss, the gruff Sam Chisholm, likes to spend bank holidays in New York, so he doesn't have to face all those empty roads - a painful reminder for a workaholic that he are keeping mum.

he cable industry had a sesfor, joint head of production at Granada announced the next sion of its own but only one day: "Sure, I've slept with John cable operator agreed to take Birt - during his speech last a place on the panel. Officially was fear of being shown up by dite men in British television.

an it be true that Laurence Marks, half of the team which wrote such hits as Birds of a Feather, was bounced out of his suite at the George Hotel to make way for John Birt? The BBC won't say, Mr Marks was unreachable and the staff

Richard Tait, head of news at ITN, had to field plenty of questions at a session on "spin doctors", following the fawning interview of John Major by the companies said the time was News at Ten's Trevor MacDon-

David Elstein, the acceptable not ripe to air their views. Insidald, No, said Mr Tait, there was no deal between the Tory spin doctors and ITN that the interview would top the running order that night. And no, he insisted, it was an internal decision to have Mr MacDonald, rather than the more aggressive Michael Brunson, conduct the interview. Just a case of bad news judgement then?

> The great and good settled in for some serious dancing and some even more serious drinking at a bash afterwards. Who was the leading independent producer seen cramped bebind the bicycle shed?

> > Mathew Horsman

RUC succession hit by crisis of confidence

DAVID MCKITTRICK Ireland Correspondent

The new Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, who is to be appointed at the end of this week from a shortlist of three, will inherit a force which is facing a policing crisis.

The stand-off during the Drumeree Orange march last month has severely dented public confidence in the RUC, among Protestants and particularly among Catholics. The Northern Ireland Police Authority, which is to make the new appointment, has acknowledged that Drumcree "has seriously damaged the credibility of the force".

The new man will take over from Sir Hugh Annesley, the Dublin-born police officer who came to the RUC from the Metropolitan:police and who has held the post for seven years.

The new appointee will face the formidable task of rebuild-

A reformer, a traditionalist and an outsider are bidding to inherit force hit by Orange stand-off both Catholics and with large sections of the Protestant community. Nationalist confidence in the force is at its lowest point for many years, while last month 150 officers left home, most temporarily, following intimidation problems with loyalists.

The three officers to be interviewed this week include the RUC's two deputy chief constables, Ronnie Flanagan and Blair Wallace, together with William Taylor, who is presently commissioner of the City of London police. The new man will take over when Sir Hugh retires in November. Mr Flanagan is one of Ulster's best-known policemen, with a profile so high that in recent years it has virtually eclipsed that of Sir Hugh. Universally regarded as the best communicator the RUC has ever produced, he has develing the RUC's relations with oped into the force's foremost oice on radio and television.

political policeman - not in the sense of holding strong opinions, but in moving easily and comfortably in political as

He is also viewed as a most

the RUC than commending it. and has lectured at Bramshill

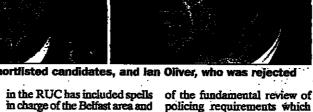

Aged 46, his 26-year career police college. He was in charge well as media circles. He has won a number of public compliments from nationalist figures more accustomed to criticising

Special Branch. A graduate, he is studying for a master's degree policing requirements which was launched during the IRA Until very recently he was hot favourite for the top post, but some believe the Drumcree Orange march crisis, in which he was closely involved, may have harmed his prospects.

Mr Flanagan's image as a thoroughly modern policeman is in contrast to the reputation of his local competitor, Blair Wallace, who with 41 years of RUC service, is viewed as an officer of the old school. Aged 59 and currently in charge of sup-port services and administration, he has kept a much lower profile and is not nearly so well known to the general public. One rumour has it that Mr Wallace might be given the post, then relinquish it in a few years in favour of Mr Flanagan. The choice is made by members of the Police Authority, a government-appointed quango, subject to the approval of Sir Patrick Mayhew, Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. The outside candidate is William Taylor, who since 1994 has been commissioner of the City of London police. Although the force is small it has assumed a pivotal importance since London's financial district became the IRA's prime terrorist target in Britain.

He has thus worked in close liaison with the RUC and with MI5. Mr Taylor, who is 49, has also served in the Thames Val-ley and Metropolitan police.

Most nationalists would tend to favour Mr Flanagan for the post, on the grounds that he is likely to be more open to changes and reforms in the force. By contrast many Unionists would prefer Mr Wallace. One candidate who was unexpectedly excluded was Ian Oliver, head of Grampian police, who is regarded as one of Britain's most intellectual police officers. Dr Oliver, who has protested to Sir Patrick, was apparently left off the shortlist because he has not completed a

Stores urged to block video of operations

CLARE GARNER

The Video Standards Council is urging stores not to stock a video released today which features close-up footage of more than 20 operations in NHS hospitals, including open-heart surgery, intimate gynaecological surgery and penile and

The council is investigating complaints made by the Patients Association that the £12.99 tape, Everyday Operations, which shows excerpts from surgeons' training videos, exploited the sick. Although the advisory body does not have the power to ban the video, it can influence large shops' stocking policies. The council's discussions with retailers so far have revealed a widespread reluctance to sell the film.

Guy Howland, a spokesman for the Patients Association, called for the video's immediate withdrawal, saying the use of the film for commercial purposes went beyond the original tween patient and film-maker. A number of patients have come into hospital and they have consented to have an operation undertaken upon them." he said. "As part of that they may also have agreed it could be used in the training of surgeons. What they have not agreed to, and it seems quite outrageous to me, is that this material has been used for a home

The council believes that the people who are unwittingly featured in the compilation have a case against the producers. There is a good chance that provisions of the Copyright Act have been prima facia breached," a spokesman said.

angle and an 18 British Board of Film Classification rating. The cover says, "This video contains seenes you may find disturbing and "over twenty brilliantly performed operations are vividly revealed".

The British Medical Association branded the video "deeply distasteful" and said it feared the film might frighten patients out of taking part in future training videos or even of coming forward for surgery at all.

David Donoghue, spokesman for the video's makers, IMC Video, defended the 50-minute film, claiming it was "serious" and "educational". The company, previously involved in the controversial video Caught in the Act, featuring footage from closed circuit television cameras, and Executions, showing executions, had gained the patients' permission to be filmed, he in-

"What we have done is open up something increasingly used and said, 'You the public, you the patients and potential patients and you who fund the NHS through your taxes, can now actually see what happens in hospitals," he said. Mr Donoghue denied that the video would attract those seeking voyeuristic excitement.

Dr Vivian Nathanson, head of the British Medical Association's ethics committee, urged the public not to watch the video. "We have no problem with people making money from educational material but to make money from frightening people and perhaps stopping that may belp them is clearly distasteful," he said.

Three men in three boats: The coraclemen of Cilgerran, (from left) Rod Bowen, Bob Bird and Max Bowen, in west Wales, go through their paces before the weekend's annual coracle races on the River Teifi, against their counterparts in Carmarthen

Health service perceived as men in suits

NICHOLAS TIMMINS Public Policy Editor

What is your picture of the perfect health authority? According to users and employees of Buckinghamshire Health Authority it is one that reads the

In market research to find out local people's perceptions of the newly formed authority, health professionals—from GPs to line trating the authority, black and and pictures of health and vi-managers—and NHS users were white pictures of barbed wire, tality. But the sting in the tail, asked to describe and illustrate their existing view of the authority - and explain how they would like it to be.

The view of the existing authority produced images of pound signs, rows of people waiting, and NHS staff who appeared unhappy. When asked to choose photographs illus-muddle, misery and of a rope stretched to breaking point were chosen, Julie Wells, the authority's director of communications reports in this week's Health Service Journal

Asked to depict how they would like the authority to be, the staff and focus groups chose according to Ms Wells, was when they were asked to depict the authority as a person, defining in addition the newspaper it would read.

The present authority was seen as male, mid-40s, balding and grey-suited, full of qualifications but lacking common warm colours, smiling faces sense, who read the Financial

CORDLESS TELEPHONE

Digital noise reducti Lest number redial

Low battery indicato 100 metre range Model PREESTYLE 120

Intercom facility 10 memories Secrecy button On hook dialling LCD display

A BT

Times or the Daily Telegraph.
The ideal was female, aged about 35, caring, confident, able, inspirational and energetic - and an Independent reader. Which miffed the authority. given that all but one of its seven senior executives are women.

The research, however, has told the executive how it wants to be seen - as a strategic leader. And tomorrow it will be buying the Independent Nicholas Timmins, who is mid-40s, but blue-suited and hirsute, is leaving the Independent to join the Financial Times. He hopes he is not lacking in com-

Consuls awarded 44% rise ... in fees

ANTHONY BEVINS Political Editor

Hourly attendance rates for consular officials abroad have quietly been increased by 44 per cent this month.

The increase in charges which was slipped through Parliament without a Foreign Office press release, put up the rate from £50 to £72 an hour with a maximum daily charge of £520; the equivalent of an annual salary of £150,000.

Providing an example of the kind of work that can attract the stiff new charges, the Consular Fees Order 1996 says that "where the attendance is for the purpose of supervising an examination", the charge may be divided between the people taking the exam.

Last year, as part of an operation to move towards "eventual full-cost recovery", consular fees increased by an average of 60 per cent, and that exercise is continued this year with an overall average increase of 20 per cent in charges.

But with charges for issuing emergency passports and othisting level, that increase disguises some marked changes. Special reduced rates for the under-25s, for issuing a transit visa to pass through the United Kingdom, and for single visit entry clearance, have been abolished. Fees are doubled, from £12.50 to £25 for a transit visa, and from £16.50 to £33 for single visit entry clearance. While the fee for issuing an emergency passport remains £10, the charge for arranging repatriation of a person or group travelling together has gone up by a fifth to £72, and the charge for providing emergency currency supplies against the payment of a sterling cheque" – has gone up by the same rate, from £30 to £36. The only apparent price cut is for "transmitting a record of a marriage under the local law to the appropriate Registrar General", which has been

ver price, we'll willingly

PLUS 10% OF THAT DIFFERENCE

OPEN TODAY IOAM-6PM

RING FREE ON 0500 425 425 FOR DETAILS OF YOUR MEAREST STORE

CORDED AND CORDLESS TELEPHONE SYSTEM TELEPHONE SYSTEM
10 memories on both phones
LCD on both phones 8 channel automatic selection

THE COMET PRICE ON Teletext Ch.4 P.425

INDEX UPDATED DAILY

Bank Holiday

Stu oca

Prin

March Co. Zermania (j. j. j. المالية المتعادلات अवस्थाती क्षा Tal. Land ≛Nord 1 kumung commi Re publication : Peronalisa (1965) 3de glicare

gent part liphoto in the in-San Bear the Road of the telephone in the contract Representation of the second population of the second विकास कर करा अपन Chaffeide in Commerce man is the little But he Berger of their Approplant of the Metadeffeet account inside of product brackened for all write

CAR TRANSPORT OF STREET

Sing of the photon to affine and Proces des disorce, is not a fooding to the Acres Markell speak of the Receipt to the that

DAII hysage Triste Be perfectly the second of the And with redshire a second

Emundania a all co sould not have much Rathers Mill Part of the maked to a process a would have be the tree See Middle How States of the st Market by livery arrest hand as you do! a prod trape the resis were be bad wan operation the TS Chot Laugh by he was one helada eight years be tille bild which proceed to the large applies the control of the large applies to the control of the large applies to th and by the mind of the fill same and the back of grant anning them ! Edwin Arnold god grids to the riber athorn of the March 1

 $\phi_{WW} \simeq w_{WW}$

an even if I maken palar range at the best of the best the Hi V Process Greet in Distant has thus we the ding with the letter many de Links where he is recd in the Thomas Tak nepolicin polic g majorantesis wealth sur Mi Umaganay. n the ground that he In he made open And telephone Be contrast to mela combining who we edly welling was head of the maple.

he is to continue a me

s most and horizonte.

s. Di Ohore who

ed to Su Patrak, a., vien of the shortly ic has not complete semmand course onsul warded 1% rise affending takes if officials almostly heco inclosivativativ Suvaile increase as that ક્ષ્મ કોણ્યુપાની લેતા હાલું છે. without a large gra-SS reicase intrings the Course Carles taximum dan eng 🕦 வுமைக்கை கிரி

NY BEVINS

ings of clauses. រំពែល ភពាក់ការប្រាស់ artik Had one smoot y Charges the core. Ipda: 1996 sa fi the attendance built cof signal serie at 2 an", the charge may between the rog he exame.

year, as pare en and to move formals (87) and identity of the terised by an office ent, and that work ed this year water женаес актоож б in charge ath charges in the acy passis and a es sent union la dienwel, that are reserve muc maked chase al reducations at Sign ten erange i das gas through the U. alom, and see velgarance has be

g Cisti Citty Politica the fee for county? ky passport who charge for push? tion of a relief, molling or observe by a tittle to Take ge for provious call arreney supplies the parise describe pich the concut. fute, how had be which has be

(POS), Levels, West HORMATION PACE

alv apparent inter ansaulting colonic ge under the bester difuctions, grange a £20.

ence Students take vocational route to university

Education Correspondent

Students with vocational A-levels are finding it easier to get into university than those with the traditional, academic qualifications, ministers are to announce this week.

More than nine out of 10 students applying to higher-edu-cation courses with General National Vocational Qualifications (GNVQs) this year have won a place, Gillian Shephard will disclose on Wednesday. Less than three-quarters of welcome increase in job-relat-A-level students are successful. ed degree courses.

The numbers going to university with vocational A-levels, introduced in 1992, are likely to double this year, new figures show. While 10,000 applied last year and 89 per cent were such that the produced Nobel prize-winners, novelists and poets as a result, he said. cessful, this year 20,000 have applied and 92 per cent are expected to be successful.

Figures from the Universities and Colleges Admissions Ser-

GNVQ exams in business studies, health and social care, leisure and tourism, science and manufacturing. Of 75,000 students who registered for the but one old university in 10 is courses in 1994, 55,000 have not applied for university places this year, suggesting that many have failed to complete their

Vocational A-levels have been criticised for being time-consuming and unreliable, with

Two years ago ministers announced plans to reform them,

but earlier this year the schools inspection body, Ofsted, found that they were still often marked inconsistently and that much of teachers' training was Right-wingers have argued for years that the exams, which are both set and marked by teachers, are bound to lead to irrelevant to them.

courses within two years.

Last year it was disclosed that almost two-thirds of the 42,000 consuming and unreliable, with many teachers lacking the skills and confidence to teach them students who started courses in 1992 and 1993 had not yet gained the full qualifications. However, some critics of the exams now believe that the latest signs are optimistic. Alan Smithers, professor of public policy at Brunel University, said there now seemed to be a

English universities had al-ways been good at teaching thinking skills, and Britain had

But Britain had always been outshone by its economic rivals when it came to applied skills, and many British inventions had been commercially ex-

vice (Ucas) will also snow that a greater proportion of young people are taking an advanced GNVQ, which is equivalent to two A-levels, alongside one traditional A-level.

However, there are still control of the world we are not very good at applying that information and exploiting wealth. But we have recognised the problem and the will is there to change it,"

Nine out of 10 GNVQ students who go on to higher education go to new universities,

Sea view: An exhibition of paintings of the coastline of northern France being prepared at Graves gallery, Sheffield Photograph: Asadour Guzelian

Prince may sue over photos with Camilla

ering legal action over the pub-lication of photographs of him Mrs Parker-Bowles's former and Camilia Parker-Bowles enjoying a weekend together at a and his second wife. His first friend's country retreat, Buckingham Palace said yesterday.

A spokeswoman for the Palace said all options were being considered over the pictures in the News of the World, adding: "We are ruling nothing out."

The publication of the photographs of the Prince again raised the question of media intrusion. A week ago the Palace rounded by intrigue." warned four photographers to stay away from the Royal Family's holiday retreat at Balmoral.
The spokesworan dismissed.

reports that the paper had been tipped off by a royal source to set up a favourable photo opportunity as "ridiculous". The News of the World in turn was said to have played up the "tipoff" line to deflect accusations of invasion of privacy.

For seasoned royal watchers the timing of the photographs' publication, a few days before the Prince and Princess of Wales's divorce, is not a coin-

According to the News of the World, a "well-spoken" woman contacted it to say that the photographer.

Prince and Mrs Parker-Bowles would be spending the weekend The Prince of Wales is consid-before last at Glyn Celyn House brother-in-law Nic Paravacini wife, Mary Ann, is Mrs Parker-Bowles's sister.

The fuzzy photographs show the Prince and Mr Paravacini strolling together, with Mrs Parker-Bowles and Sukie Paravacini some paces behind.

Phil Hail, the paper's editor, said: "The information that led us to secure these pictures is sur-

The theory in royal-watching circles is that attempts are being made to stage-manage pub-lic knowledge of the friendship between the Prince and Mrs Parker-Bowles, so that one day they can appear together openly. Many feel that it is too early for a public demonstration of a relationship which effectively doomed the Prince's marriage from the start.

Another theory is that someone in the Princess's camp tipped-off the newspaper, to show the Prince as "tactless" to be seen with Mrs Parker Bowles just before the divorce. Most likely however is that the house was simply watched by a

DAILY POEM

Paysage Triste By TS Eliot

The girl who mounted in the omnibus The rainy day, und paid a penny fare Who answered my appreciative stare With that averted look without surprise Which only the experienced can wear A girl with reddish hair and faint blue eyes

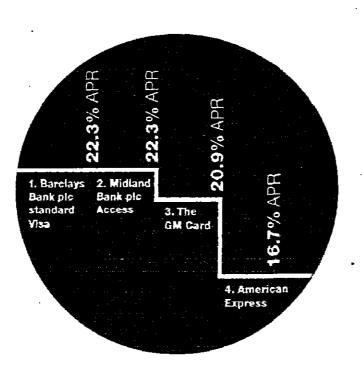

An almost denizen of Leicester Square. We could not have had her in the box with us She would not have known how to sit, or what to wear Yet if I classe my eyes I see her moving With loosened hair about her chamber With naked feet passing across the skies

She would have been most crudely ill at ease She would not have known how to sit, or what to wear Nor, when the lights went out and the horn began Nor, when the ugus went out that the north began Have leaned as you did, your elbow on my knees To prod impetuously with your fan The smiling stripling with the pink soaped face Who had your opera-glasses in his care.

In 1909 TS Eliot bought a 25 cent leather-bound notebook while he was on holiday on the New England coast. Over the next eight years he filled it with 50 or so poems, never published, which passed to his benefactor John Quim, and in 1958 to the Berg Collection of the New York Public Library. These to the Berg Collection of the New York Public Library. These make up Inventions of the March Hare: Poems 1909-1917, edited and richly annotated by Christopher Ricks. The notes, which occupy half the book, supply line by line insight into Eliot's vast literary memory, this poem alone complete with 18 refuses, amongst them to Browning, Wyatt, Verlaine, Milton, Keates, Edwin Arnold—and a charming letter to Virginia Woolf Richt mains to the course Inventions of the March Hare by TS Eliot is published by Faber at £30 on 9 September. Copyright: Valerie Eliot, 1996.

"Sti of American

Think again.

Are you stuck at the top of the interest rate ladder, paying as much as 23% APR? Come back down to earth with American Express. With our new Credit Card not only will you enjoy a low 16.7% APR on any existing balance transfer but also on all new purchases. Plus there's no annual fee for the first year.

To find out how we can help you do more, call now:

0800 700 767

Cards

APR based on £2,000 average line of credit with fee waived first year. Competitors' APRs based on £1,000 of credit with 1. £10 fee, 2. No fee, 3. No fee. Source: Money£acts. American Express may vary the APK cases on 12,000 average line of Game and Jee analysis gent. Competitors APR cases on 12,000 of treat with 1. 210 fee, 2. No Jee, 30 are respective. American Express may vary the APR, interest rates and other charges from time to time. A written quotation is available on request. The standard interest rate for goods and services is 1.3% per month (16.7% APR) and 1.7% per month (22.4% APR) for cash advances, which must be repaid in full each month. The minimum monthly repayments will be 5% of the outstanding balance or £20 whichever is greater. Applicants must be 18 or over. Subject to status. American Express Services Europe Ltd, Reg. Office, Portland House, 1 Stag Place, London SWIE 5BZ, Reg. No: 1833139.

Pa

Wa

Language revival: Strike threat by poets is only part of renewed interest which nationalists hope will protect oral tradition

Welsh speak up for their ancient tongue

TONY HEATH

Poets are threatening to "strike" over it, footballers are going to night school to learn it and doctors may soon be asked to sit a proficiency in it: the revival of interest in the Welsh language is gathering pace.

When tension in Bosnia was close to breaking point the Royal Welch Fusiliers communicated in Welsh over the radio, thwarting eavesdroppers from the warring factions

Around the same time, learner drivers in Wales were allowed to display "D" plates. (D for Dysgwr – Welsh for learner) ending a minor skirmish in the battle to sustain a language spoken by nearly one in five of Vales' 2.6 million people.

Bards, the Welsh poets regarded as the language's guardians, are threaten boycott the successful BBC Radio Cymru station because they claim the language of broadcasters is going downmarket. The British Medical Association

'Children are being used as the poor bloody infantry in an unwinnable is miffed at the proposal by a leading health service manager, Dr Carl Clowes, for a proficiency test. The doctors body says that it is hard enough to recruit GPs without imposing a battle'

linguistic requirement. For some Welsh is an important rung on the career ladder - nowhere more so than in the burgeoning media industry. Over 4,000 work in the 100-odd independent television production companies; fewer than 600 work in Welsh coal mines. Mark Aizlewood the Welsh footballer capped 48 times, Nigel Walker, the black Cardiff XV winger and Ron Davies, Labour's spokesman for Wales, are among those who have tak-

For decades the language declined. In 1931 the Office of Population Census and Surveys recorded 909,000 speakers. Today at around 500,000 the situation is stabilising and there are even hopes of an upturn.

For the past 15 years the Gov-ernment has identified the language as a suitable case for treatment. The militant Welsh Language Society rocked the early Thatcher years. The threat by the veteran nationalist Gwynfor Evans to starve himself unless the Government established a Welsh language television service forced. Today Sianel Pedwar Cymru (S4C) flourishes with an annual subsidy of £63m. The Welsh Language Board, charged with ining the ancient tongue, collects £2m a year from the Weish Office. Dubbed "the quango for the lingo" its chair-man is the nationalist peer Lord Elis-Thomas, once a left-wing Plaid Cymru MP. Other government cash sup-ports the eisteddfod, Welsh language publishing and Weish education to the tune of £10m a year. The language is a national curriculum subject, a cause of concern at schools along the Welsh side of Offa's Dyke which draw some pupils

With the exception of John Redwood, who refused to sign official letters drafted in Welsh, successive Tory Welsh secre-taries have handled the language question with a sensitivity that coutrasts sharply with the approach to problems such as the deprivations of the old mining valleys. As a bonus the government has kept the lid on nationalist protests to an extent not seen in Scotland where language is barely an issue.

Controversy, a staple of Welsh life, continues. Lord Elis-Thomas says the language is no longer a political issue. But he adds: "We see evidence of a lack of confidence with regard to the future security of the language and in the extent to which people use Welsh - especially as regards reading, writing and dealing with officialdom."

Dr Tim Williams an academic whose PhD on the decline of the language caused a furore a few years ago. He warned about being "misled by the statistics. Children are being used as the poor bloody infantry in an unwinnable battle"

As fluent a Welsh speaker as any Bard Dr Williams' military analogy comes over en clair just as the fusiliers' messages did in Bosnia. Language is all being bilingual helps keep vil

Brecon Beacons National Park as community development officer a year ago, she spoke no Welsh, writes Tony Heath. Today her command of the language enables her to cope happily as she visits villagers in an area where Welsh is the usual courages staff to learn the language and to attend evening es and intensive weekend instruction. Mrs Jordan said: "The time spent learning Weish (Women's Institutes, your

Her job entails liaising with communities, spread around a 6 statutory community coming and the statutory communities, spread around a statutory communities.

Only 30,000 people live in the park - 8,000 in Brecon, the capital" of the Beacons.

Community groups, including farmers' clubs and parent nities abve and help them teacher associations, as well as grow." cus, call on Mis Jordan's ex- is for English to be used when village halls, raise funds for community events and help to get environment projects up and

Celtic revival makes itself heard far and wide running," Mrs Jordan said.

ties", Howev often proceed more smoothly in-Welsh. This proved to be the case in Mysidfai, a village at the British Ambassador to Iceland

Malling are to ≱kabirun.

properties de

substant L

and need people lik

ways of collection

By h

Give your cima a flying start

Did you know that some 50% of your child's brain capacity is developed in the first five or six years of life?

Whether that capacity develops to the full depends largely on a stimulating, thought-provoking, early home environment.

That's the inspiration behind a new programme called FUNdamentals. Its aim is a happy, well-rounded child who is able to read, write and do elementary maths - even before going to school. Plus a child who's acquired other essential attributes - social skills, self-esteem, creativity, a rich vocabulary, memory skills, values and the ability to think clearly.

FUNdamentals makes the utmost of the time you can spend together.

You'll never be stuck for something worthwhile to do.

ACTIVITY CARDS

Hundreds of fun activities to develop concentration, rich vocabulary, logic and memory.

Pottos: One of many games to build concentration and the ability to see logical patterns.

VIDEO Experts from around the world

give you the best advice on raising a bright happy child.

Nancy McNabb from Montessori International is one of dozens of experts on a feature length video.

self-esteem and more.

GUIDEBOOK

Values: How to build responsibility through a daily 'To Do List'.

Contains hundreds more ideas to build social skills, creativity,

READING GAMES

Included: over 600 colour word cards and games like Phonic Fun and Beginning Letter Snap.

Word Bingo: An entertaining way to master the 450 most frequently read words.

There's a FUNdamentals for 0-18 months and one for 2-6 years old, the critical years. Never again will you have the chance to influence your child so profoundly or so positively.

Give your child - or grandchild - a gift that will last for the rest of his or her life. A lifelong joy for learning and the ability to learn quickly, think clearly and to be creative.

As NEWSWEEK recently put it, 'Give your children

You'll find it costs so little to give so much.

anything's possible.'

the stimulation they need when they need it, and

NUMBER GAMES

included: Number rods, board games, dot cards and scores of fun maths games.

Maths Battle: How a pack of playing cards will skyrocket her ability to add and subtract.

WRITING GAMES

Included: Cut out shape guides for letter formation and spelling games like Word Jigsaw.

Back Writing: A sure-fire way to enable children to 'feel' how letters

For FREE information

FREEPHONE 0800 50 20 20

Learning Systems Ltd

Archbishop calls for halt to 'DIY morality'

Britain was suffering from the consequences of a "privatised, DIY morality", the Archbishop moral standards, both personal and corporate."

He added: "Too often people of Canterbury said yesterday. Dr George Carey said some-times in modern Britain the only thing that could not be tolerated was to say that something was wrong.

He made his call for the reestablishment of moral guidelines to a congregation of about 20,000 at Britain's biggest Christian arts festival.

Dr Carey was speaking at the 23rd annual Greenbelt Festival, this year being staged near Corby, Northamptonshire. And his message was ap-plauded enthusiastically by a gathering of mainly young peo-ple, dressed in T-shirts and

The Archbishop told the crowd that he had last attended the festival 17 or 18 years ago when he had camped out with his family.
He said at that time the main theme of the festival was radical Christianity, and that theme still continued. Dr Carey said to be radical went to the roots of the Christian faith. And when he was a teenager, Christianity was mainly characterised by a series of But he told the crowd that Britain was now going too far the other way and it was time for some traditional modern boundaries to be re-drawn. "At present we live in a society where sometimes the only.

thing that cannot be tolerated is to say that something is wrong," said Dr Carey.
"We have to say there are are encouraged to think no further than their own private "We are now seeing the consequences of a privatised, DIY morality working itself out in many aspects of our society. "This applies also to our Church. It is tempting to look no further than our own private world, to focus on maintenance rather than mission, to focus on survival rather than sacrifice."

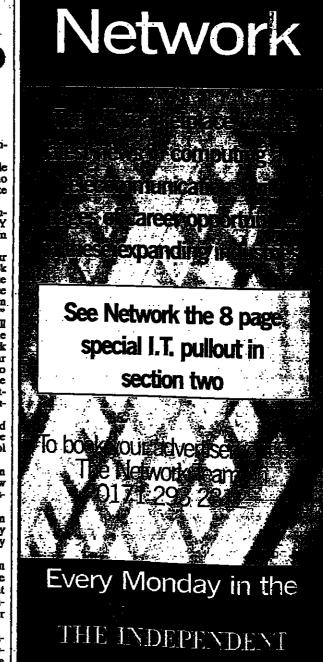

Dr Carey said the Church still had much to learn from the scandal of the "Nine O'Clock services" in Sheffield last year (where rave music was used to attract young people, and the worship took on cult-like at-tributes). He added that churches had to be accountable.

The Archbishop also paid tribute to Christopher Gray, the vicar murdered in Liverpool "His story, I hope, will be an inspiration to many to a new commitment to radical Christianity," said Dr Carey.

The Archbishop's sermon was the highlight of the four-day festival, which is co-organised by Christian Aid. The crowd sang modern hymns in reggae-style with the backing of a rock band, in what was billed as "the funkiest communion that you have ever experienced". During the festival, which attracted mainly people aged be-tween 18 and 25; crowds have been entertained by rock bands and a variety of religious section two

Parties warned on GP funding

NICHOLAS TIMMINS Public Policy Editor

A warning to Labour not to scrap GP fundbolding and to the Conservatives not to force it onto more family doctors has come from a key piece of research into the controversial scheme.
One of the first studies to compare fundholding with GP commissioning – where family doctors work with health authorities to buy health care - has shown that both have advantages, and the two approaches do different things well.

Fundholding where the GPs directly control their own budget, appears better at achieving short-term efficiency gains, the work by the London School of Economics shows. But locality purchasing, as GP commissioning is sometimes known, also brings advantages.

And as more fundholders band together in multi-funds, or enter total purchasing projects, where they buy all health care, the differences between the two models are becoming the differences between the two models. models are becoming "rather nominal" the study found.

The study, led by Professor
Howard Glennerster, co-direcor of the LSE's Welfare State rogramme, concludes: "Neither political party should force either andholding or locality pur-casing as a universal solution."

Instead, commissioning slould be given the same level Oradministrative back-up as fudholding enjoys - somethig health ministers have gen-ertly refused to do - while Laour should drop its plans to scrp fundholding.

he biggest single change whih fundholding has producd is to "move general prac- Paper WSP/123

tice in from the cold", Professor Glennerster and his colleagues say. In 1990, family doctors did not feel involved in mainstream NHS planning. Since then there has been "a sea change" as fundholding was introduced and as GPs who did not want to join that scheme banded together to form purtent to which GPs of all kinds are now involved in local health planning is quite new," the study says. And that change "is more important than the differences between fundholders

The research looked at how well family doctor groupings performed in six different health authorities. Overall the fund-bolders achieved greater changes. Those in GP commissioning groups, where the health authority still controls the budget, had greater frustrations an agent at one remove doing the purchasing on your behalf was less satisfactory for some GPs than acting directly".

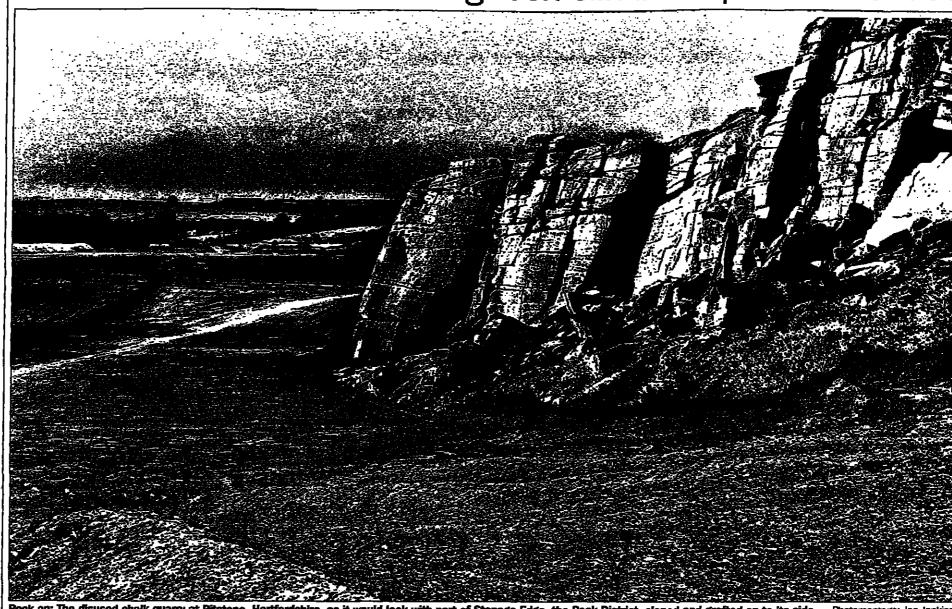

and non-fundholders".

But both achieved real gains for patients and "fundholders and locality groups do different things well". Commissioning groups were keener to see that all patients in the area gained from changes made, not just the patients of an individual To push for universal fundholding or to seek to abolish it would seem unnecessarily de-structive," the study says, "especially given our poor state of knowledge of the comparative advantages and disadvantages of the alternatives." ☐ Alternatives to Fundholding,

LSE Welfare State Programme

Publisher seeks funds to bring rock-climbers' paradise South

STEPHEN GOODWIN

An idea is germinating in the sometimes fevered minds of the climbing fraternity that the Millennium might be marked by providing its rock-starved southern England members with their very own crag.
Why should keen London conservationists can be imag-

climbers have to scorch up the motorway to the Peak District or beyond when the technology exists to graft 400 yards of gritstone edge on to the Chilterns or the North Downs? The Pavlovian response of ined, and there are a good many climbers who would balk at the artificiality of such a crag. But there is no doubt it would be serious. be heavily used. This weekend, The crag is the brain-child of hundreds of climbers will crowd near Tunbridge Wells, the only natural climbing ground in the Home Counties, which is visibly eroding. Indoor climbing walls are also proliferating in London and the South-East.

But the Millennium Crag would have none of the managed security of an indoor wall.
Like its natural equivalents in on to the sandstone outcrops

in North Wales, it would be used for "adventure climbing", where the consequences of a fall could

Ken Wilson, a publisher of mountaineering books and a full-volume advocate of the traditional approach to climbing. The combination of a risky sport and a wonderful natural setting is a very heady mixture. But ... it's not something that youngsters coming to sport on climbing walls are getting," he said. Hence his idea idea that a southern-based club

"great and good" should apply for Lottery funding to build a crag on the north-west fringe of the M25,

The planned site - a disused chalk quarry at Pitstone, on the Chiltern escarpment near Tring, Hertfordshire, is owned by Castle Cement, which is awaiting the result of a public inquiry into their plan for a land-fill site. Local villagers have opposed the rubbish tip and say they would welcome a recreational use for

The quarry could accommo-Like its natural equivalents in idea that a southern-based club date a range of rock features - for the lack of a group willing false. This could give a taste of the Peak, the Lake District or or some of mountaineering's buttresses, steep edges and to push for it; to formulate a bid the real freedom of the sport."

free-standing boulders. The to the Millennium Commisbiggest feature would be up to sion or to the Sports Council 400 yards of slabs, copying the and then raise a share of the Idwal Slabs in North Wales, money. The British Moungrafted on to the side of Picton taineering Council (BMC) has Hill at the back of the quarry. offered support. Part of Stanage Edge, in the "The impetus needs to come Peak District, could also be from a club or some of climb-

Nothing on this scale has so far been attempted in Europe. The spray-on concrete fabrications, sculptured and textured like the "living" rock, would cost some £750,000 for 100 yards. But the crag project may fail

"It's a great idea. If people's only experience of the climbing is on indoor walls, it's totally false. This could give a taste of

ing's statesmen in the Home

Counties," said Derek Walker,

a former president of the Climbers' Club and former

BMC general secretary.

LOYDS BANK BECAUSE I OUR CUSTOMERS."

WHE STARTING YOUR OWN BUSINESS, LLOYDS BANK CAN GIVE YOU THE HEEP AND INFORMATION YOU NEED

etting up on your own is an exciting experience, but it takes courage, too. However, you can feel more sure of success when you can rely on getting the kind of information and support your business needs.

By listening carefully to what our new business customers want and need, we've developed a range of business services to help people like you.

For example, your first year's banking is free.* We can provide ways of helping with book-keeping, sales prospecting and debt collection. And if you need extra finance, we'll discuss the possibility of a starter loan at an attractive fixed interest rate.

Interested? Then give us a call on 0345 00 33 77, or drop in at your local Lloyds Bank branch. Our experienced and conscientious Business Managers will be delighted to give you all the help and information you need.

Take your first step now - You can call us 7 days a week, between 9am and 8pm (10am and 2pm at weekends) on 0345 00 33 77, to arrange to meet a Lloyds Bank Business Manager. All calls are charged at local rates.

*New business customers with an anticipated first year banking turnover of up to £1 million receive banking free of account transaction charges whether in credit or overdrawn

THE THOROUGHBRED BANK

Lloyds Bank Pic., 71 Lombard Street, London EC3P 3BS.

she said glace of a stational Kennett Lastwe demonstrate in da Vede, in orchit giingnal i anii she said contain ork and etc.

an Alter of page

adition

e claimed a with Sinc Brownians Me within and the Property land cont un tun it in ... I in being bir friedrich ponded conseque the disappearing to

; for the iting and s with atunities

3 page ut in dustries.

ement call mon 12

in the DENT

Bar owners cry foul over football on TV

ELIZABETH NASH

A deal to be clinched this week allowing Spanish television to show football matches six nights a week - one more than last season - has thrown owners of bars and restaurant into a panic. They see football mania as the

When the season opens next Sunday, millions of Spaniards will stay at home, glued to their sets every night of the week ex-cept Friday, leaving city centres, bars and cinemas that would otherwise be vibrant deserted.

The television channels are delighted at the huge business brought in by soaring viewing fig-gross domestic product. So are the football clubs, whose entire budgets are covered by the huge sums paid by television companies for broadcasting rights.

The deal is a carve-up between the private channel Antenna Tres and the two state channels, who will show matches from the Spanish league and Europe, ensuring that the football schedules do not clash. 25.

But the mighty National Association of Restaurants, Cafés and Bars fears its livelihood will suffer a "mortal blow" and threatens reprisals. The association's leader, Ignacio Cabello, warned that the deaf will cost its sector by 30 per cent. His 800,000 members plan counter-measures, ranging from a boycott of products adver-tised during televised matches to all-out strikes. The addition of Monday, hitherto a footballfree evening, will alone result in £300m being stripped from restaurants' takings, he said. Mr Cabello even issued an appeal that could rend the fabric of that most precious Spanish in-stitution, the family, by urging women to abandon their husbands on Saturday nights and venture out alone.

Following protests last year the television companies agreed - grudgingly - to bring the Sat-half an hour to 8.30pm, enabling fans to go out for dinner or a film after the match. But it made little difference to the slump in trade on what ought to be the week's busiest night out.

As it is, non-football fans in Madrid appreciate the opportunity to cruise the tapas bars in comfort, enjoy uncrowded cin-emas and drive unhindered up the Gran Via, which is usually immobilised by traffic. Old hands, however, know to move on before 11.30pm when the streets are jammed once more, taxis are unobtainable and bars are

The divisive effect within the family caused by televised foot-

ures, calculated at 28 per cent of trade and could cut jobs in the urday night broadcast forward by ball became evident during the Euro 96 championship, when increasing numbers of households acquired a second set so that women could retreat to another room and watch soap operas, romantic Hollywood classics and a slew of the televisual equivalents of Hola! magazine scheduled to compete with wall-to-wall football. With a record nine broadcast mes to be played each week in the coming season, these pressures will intensify. But the prospect of Spain's night spots being taken over by bands of single women out for a good time may prompt profounder transformation of

Defeated Russians crawl out of Grozny

Triumphant rebels escort foes out of city, reports Carlotta Gall

A Russian jeep flying a white flag led a sorry convoy out of the centre of Grozny at noon yesterday. Four military lorries followed, each towing a broken down Russian armoured personnel carrier, bumping along on flat tyres. Chechen fighters, armed with Kalashnikovs, lines of grenades strapped to their chests, sat in the cab alongside the Russian soldiers who were driving. It was the beginning of the withdrawal of Russian troop, 19 days after Chechen rebels seized control of the city in a devastating raid that left thousands of Russian troops surrounded and hundreds dead.

"The 101st Brigade was surrounded here," said Khunkar Pasha Israpilov, a young Chechen commander whose men now control the area.

"In principle they could not leave, they had no way out. Now I have an order to let them go back to their base in Khankala," he said.

Beside him stood a Russian Lieutenant-Colonel, Igor Rudneyov. "This is the first stage in play," he said. "I think our commanders understand the situation, there is already an agreement and we have mutu-

The two sides started talking said, as Russia's national security adviser, Alexander Lebed, and the Chechen chief of staff, Aslan Maskhadov, secured a ceasefire agreement.

On Saturday the Chechens accompanied a Russian convov. bringing water, food and medicine to Russian posts, and evacuated the wounded. The Russian soldiers drove through the market, stony faced. The Chechens sitting beside them were shouting to their friends, raising their fists in the air.

The Russians were pulling out of their posts gathering into larger headquarters. Over leave the city for two large Russian bases just outside Grozny, Mr Israpilov said.

Lieutenant-Colonel Rudneyov said: "We have been ornot need their armoured personnel carriers or their Kalashnikovs. Lebed said it can be over and done with in 10 days."

Asked if he felt the Russian withdrawal meant a defeat, the Russian colonel said: "No one won, there were losses on both sides. You cannot talk of losing

But while the Russian troops were gathering to leave, the Chechen fighters were settled in among the ruins of the city in freshly dug trenches.

There was no ultimatum for dered to let them go, with their armour and weapons. We do city, Lieutenant-Colonel Rudnevov said. But Sultan Minavev. a Chechen commander accompanying the Russians, said: "Just those who are needed to guard the city will stay. The rest will go back to their bases."

Some 200 Russian servicemen remained in one of the nearby apartment blocks. The windows were bricked up, theground floor rooms sandbagged. Two soldiers stood on a balcony watching the Chechen fighters milling in the streets below. It was the first time armed Chechen fighters were back in numbers at the Minutka roundabout since Russian forces pushed them out in February last year in a bloody battle that sand civilian lives and thousands of Russian casualties.

Dead bodies of Russian soldiers still lay in the streets yesterday from the latest fighting. One blackened corpse was sprawled on the kerb, yards from his burned out truck.

In the city centre Chechen fighters had taken over a key Russian post. A Chechen jeep, flying the green flag of independence, raced past a Russian post on the central bridge.

Towards Government House, which Chechen fighters still gave a wide berth, Russian soldiers were moving in the rubble. Chechen fighters sat 100 yards away. Together they had gathered 22 bodies of Russian soldiers on Saturday morning. The Russian troops, mostly conscripts, appeared exhausted. The bodies were men from their unit. They had fled into a nearby building and held out for days, unaware that another Russian unit was across the street. A Russian officer, finishing a conversation with his Chechen counterpart, said simply: "They want to come in and Peace talks in Chechnya were interrupted yesterday after Alexander Lebed, the envoy of Boris Yeltsin, cancelled a meeting with rebel leaders and flew back to Moscow, saying he wanted the President's personal approval for proposals about the republic's status.

No sooner had he boarded the aircraft than his mission hit fresh difficulties when the commander of Russian forces in the war zone called off a meeting with the Chechen chief of staff, Aslan Maskhadov. General Vyachesiav Tikhomirov refused to go to the talks because of an incident in Grozny on Saturday in which Chechen fighters intercepted a convoy of Interior Ministry troops and released them only after they had handed over their weapons, 50 in all.

The general, who last week gave his backing to a threat to launch an all-out assault on the city, said the meeting was can- Lebed's return to Morov celled because the Chechens where he intends to see the failed to respond to demands that the weapons be returned.

For the same reason, plans to withdraw Russian troops from Grozny were delayed yesterday, although federal forces began to leave parts of south-ern Chechnya. Two battalions reportedly left Shatoi and Veo, two flashpoints of the war.

By standards of the Chechen war, the Grozny incident was petty. The Chechens apologised, saying the fighters were renegades, who had been detained. The general's stance is certain to intensify suspicions that he is among those in top military ranks who strongly oppose Mr Lebed's mission to end the 20-month conflict, in which 35,000 have died. Mr Lebed, an old colleague of the general, frequently complains about a "third force" determined to prolong the war.

Last night the Chechens said

views of Mr Yeltsin, the Time

Welfar

THE NFL STAF

and experts in internation law over proposals presentedly the

Although details as unknown, both sides appar to favour elections in Chrhuya and a referendum. Althogh the Russians are though to be willing to allow some intepen-dence, including a sepsate ju-dicial system, constituten, and dicial system, constitu security services, Mosbw still regards complete automy as impossible. Yesterday Ir Chernomyrdin reinforced als view, saying Chechuya aust be within Russia", althogh its ex-act status would be ocided at a later date. One ticking point is the Cheches' desire for their own armyRussia is willing to allow their to serve in their own forcesin the re-public, but it want their military to come order the umbrella of the feeration.

SWIFTCALL

FANTASTIC PRICES AT ALL TIMES

de UK +44 171 488 2001

Australia Canada Ireland Germany

Hong Kong Singapore Japan Taiwan

South Africa Brazil

 FREEPHONE access to our exchange  Pre-payment ensures no bill worries * Can be used from any tonephone * No fuss-quick and easy connection

PLEASE HAVE YOUR CREDIT CARD READY OPERATORS ARE STANDING BY 24HRS A DAY 7 DAYS A WEEK READY TO TAKE YOUR CALL

Two days after a controversial police operation to remove more than 200 illegal immi-grants from a Paris church, President Jacques Chirac said it was "out of the question" for France to alter its immigration policy, which was one of "very great firmness". The laws could be "improved" but the policy would not change.

He was speaking after dis-cussions with the Prime Minister, Alain Juppé, to prepare the new political term. While Mr Chirac seemed to express support for the decision to use force, the outcome of Friday's operation remained confused vesterday, with most of the immigrants released from detention and only four summarily deported. Leaders of the protest said they intended to reassemble and would insist on collective negotiations with the authorities.

The main focus yesterday was on a court called into special session to consider the cases of 80 of the immigrants evicted from the church of St Bernard on Friday, Proceedings began two hours late after lawvers for the detainees said they needed time to acquaint themselves with the files. Few of the immigrants turned up. More that 30 were freed on Saturday after a different court refused to extend detention from 24 hours to six days, saying the applications were faulty or unjustified. The Paris authorities are to appeal. The detentions were not the only part of the operation to go awry from the authorities' point of view. On Saturday demonstrators blocked a main road near Evreux military airfield, where a plane was being prepared to repatriate several dozen illegal immigrants. When the plane left, it was delayed for six hours at its first port of call, Dakar, in Senegal, because staff refused to service it. Only four of those on board, all from Mali, were from the St Bernard group; the others were subject to earlier deportation orders.

If there were hitches on Saturday, events the previous night had elements of farce. Marchers responding to a call for a rally on Friday evening defied police and continued to the centre where most of the St Bernard group had been taken. When they got near Vin-corners, consulting maps to find out where to go. Their route took them by the edge of evening's trotting was entering its last stages. Riot police, con-cealed in the trees, emerged and fired tear-gas, which frightened the horses, and threatened a mêlée of marchers, horses, race goers and police.

About the same time, the first of the detainees, mostly women and all the children, were being released to ensure France me its obligations under intention al conventions not to keep children in custody overnight. Some of those released were deposited at outlying Métro sta-tions, apparently the only addresses they had given on the form when they were registered

Yesterday the tally of Friday's massive operation was: four men deported to Mali; no more than 16 people detained, 40 people given permission to rees pending. The only emerging agreement, from lawyers, politicians and commentators alike was that it was high time to clarify the immigration law to prevent similar situations in future President Chirac's statement cennes, it was dark, and demon- suggested that he would apstrators could be seen on street prove such a project.

M 26 Albahar bag

eculem damagala appeared bear population

egasited self-at that वि स्टान्स का _{मान} telling of these tot the televisial recomber with all the Health and the rest of this billing of the e played could need ning whom they serving to the purple of the principle of the principle of the principle of the purple man brombt 3 transton mathyn of tatends to see its Me lelt.m. the last

Viktur (la emanda

ets in microstice) 🗗 pomia prevanteli ir ingh defines and b

plone fieben : itt f to bened brendan Thès^{èle} m ster thoughts b achiding a septately

afres, examination of

METRICO, FRANKS

complete miennis

ple, desteroin his ber

in erintare of the spik

Chechara was k

luarle", althoraction

de miniff in carping

Mair. One taket

the threbe desir

r own armi shoops

to allow ther he wet

own furer on the st

but it want their mi

to count side in

is of the fee thing

Netanyahu at bay over Weizman's invite to PLO leader

President Ezer Weizman, an ar-chitect of Israel's 1979 peace treaty with Egypt, responded yesterday to a cry for help from Yasser Arafat by inviting the Palestinian leader to meet him at his private seaside villa at Caesarea in northern Israel.

The invitation was seen as a calculated spur to the right-wing Likud Prime Minister, Ben-jamin Netanyahu, who has pre-varicated over a meeting of his own with Mr Arafat since he took office in June. He has declined to set a date for planned talks between the Israeli De-fence Minister, Yitzhak Mordechai, and Mr Arafat. A spokesman for the President told The Independent last night that the meeting Mr Weizman would take place before the Jewish new year, which is on 14 September. Asked whether Mr Weizman would co-ordinate the arrangements with the Prime Minister, he replied: "Maybe, maybe not."

Mr Weizman's initiative places the spotlight on a grow-ing anxiety in Israel's defence, political and media establishment that the Netanyahu government is playing for time and no longer sees a need to maintain the peace momentum. Israelis who had begun to side diplomacy: President Ezer Weizman in Cae with Benjamin Netanyahu yesterday

enjoy a more open Middle East tinues," he added, "Arafat may suddenly are feeling isolated. tinues," he added, "Arafat may allow his security forces to ease Gideon Ezra, a Likud backbencher and former deputy chief of the Shin Bet internal security service, said yesterday: "It à-tête with the Prime Minister is time to stop playing games with the Palestinians." The influential daily Ha'aret: this weekend quoted a from one senior security official that footdragging could provoke renewed attacks by Islamist he was trying to take over the negotiations. But the 72-yearfanatics. Mr Arafat was coming under increasing pressure, the official said, because of the diplomatic stagnation, the collapse of the besieged Palestinian economy and the violation of human rights by the Palesdenied a report that he had threatened to receive Mr Arafat this week if Mr Netanyahu did

up on Hamas, and he won't care

After a hastily arranged tete-

if there are terror attacks."

yesterday, President Weizman not agree to talk to Mr Arafat old President, who has been a minister under both Likud and Labour colours, clearly was in no mood to accept a prime min-

Mr Weizman said he had retinian police. "If his distress conceived a letter from Mr Arafat complaining about the stalled peace process. "He is in dis-tress," the President said. tress," the President saio.

"Arafat, whether we want it or not, today has control over two million people. When a leader like this asks to see me. I think I must respond to him."

Despite an unconfirmed report by Israel radio that Mr Netanyahu would meet Mr Arafat soon, the Prime Minister was still stonewalling. "I don't think it is worthwhile," he insisted, "to hold a meeting that is just ceremonial. When the time comes when I think there will be a purposeful meeting, it will indeed

The Hebrew press, which has never been particularly friendly towards Mr Netanyahu, has become universally hostile. Yoel Marcus, Ha aretz's most widely read columnist, detected a reversion to hard-line Likud ideology, which he feared would lead to armed struggles with the Palestinians and Syrians. "When the voice is the voice of Netanyahu's pragmatism," he wrote, "but the hands are the hands of a Likud ideologue, the confrontation is written on the wall." The columnist's sardonic colleague, Zvi Barel, added: "Netanyahu's government is returning Israel to the familiar situation in which it functions best: a small

US fails to stem Kurdish bloodshed involvement even after Robert round of peace talks, probably intervention from Baghdad by

HUGH POPE Istanbui

The intervention of a senior American official has failed to halt an outbreak of inter-Kurdish fighting in northern Iraq, where hopes are now pinned on a US-backed peace conference due to be held in London.

The Kurdish Democratic

Pelletreau, the State Depart-Near Eastern Affairs, called by satellite telephone to warn the KDP leader, Massoud Barzani, and his rival, Jalal Talabani, Kurdistan (PUK). On Friday Washington said it timed with increasing Iranian and a promise to attend a new both have been shielded against ton Road.

in London, after the worst ment's Assistant Secretary for clashes between the Kurdish rivals since last year. Both sides spoke of hundreds of casualties in six days of fighting.
The KDP rules that part of leader of the Patriotic Union of northern Iraq near the Turkish and Syrian border, while the PUK is strongest in big towns Operation Provide Comfort, a small Western air force based in Turkey, but it has not saved the Kurds from themselves.

The KDP said that the outbreak of fighting over the weekend concentrated on a pass leading through the north-eastern mountains known since the believed Mr Pelletreau's inter- to the east and along the Iran- days of British colonial in-Party (KDP) said fighting con-vention had secured a cease-fire ian border. Since the Gulf war, volvement in Iraq as the Hamil-

Welfare reform tensions set to darken Democratic convention

Clinton under fire, writes Rupert Cornwell in Chicago

The Democratic rift over welfare reform, pitting President Bill Clinton against his party's liberal wing and even its very chairman, is casting a germine cloud of controversy over the convention which opens today - the first in Chicago since the bloodstained gathering of 1968 that has won the city an unwelcome niche in American political infamy. In interviews this weekend, Mr Clinton acknowledged continuing deep tensions in his party over his signature last week of a welfare reform bill that removes federal guarantees of help for poor children dating back to the New Deal of Franklin Roosevelt, the Democrats' greatest political Patricia Ireland, president of the National Oragnization for Women, denounced Mr Clinton and accused him of caving in to religious and political extremists. "While some of us may hold our ton, many of us will refuse to lift a finger or contribute a penny toward his re-election." she said. "We know he is at best our option this year, not our answer.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS 96

The disagreement seems bound to surface during four days of confabulation that otherwise will be a re-coronation of a sitting President. "We're not going to push anyone into a cor-ner," Mr Clinton said, referring to scheduled speakers such as the civil rights leader Jesse Jackson and the party's chairman, Senator Christopher Dodd of Connecticut, both of whom harshly criticised him.

But despite this argument, the differences far outnumber the similarities with 32 years ago, when the Democrats last gathered on the shores of Lake Michigan, and watched the national agony over the Vietnam War turn downtown Chicago into an urban battlefield. For all the controversy within Democratic ranks, welfare reform is overwhelmingly popular among the public. It is unlikely to be more than a sideshow on the path to what Democrats hope will be victory this November and the first time a sitting President and term since FDR in 1936. Chicago, too, is on its best behaviour. The city has been spruced up with almost Soviet zeal and the police, fresh from "sensitivity training", are under instructions to be as gentle as possible. "There's not going to be any confrontation," says Richard M Daley, Chicago's mayor and son of Richard J Daley, the powerbroker supreme who ruled Chicago for two decades and ordered the savage crackdown against the demonstrators of 1968. ner Westside sports arena where ous elections are any yardstick.

the convention will be held. Inside the hall, welfare aside, the convention promises to be uneventful and as carefully packaged as its Republican counterpart earlier this month
- so uneventful indeed that a presidential train trip has been scheduled across the Midwest for its first three days, during which Mr Clinton will be making policy pronouncements on crime, education and the environment, to create at least the illusion of news. On Friday, the day after Mr Clinton delivers an acceptance speech his sides are billing as a State of The Union II", he and Vice-President Al Gore will repeat the post-convention bus tour that was a highlight of the 1992 campaign, this time spend-ing two days travelling through Illinois, Kentucky and Tennessee. Inside the United Arena, however, the Democrats will have a job to match the spark merated by the Republicans in San Diego. No former presidents, no General Colin Powell will be providing fireworks, and it was not even clear whether Mario Cuomo, former New York Governor and the party's most inspirational speaker - but a bitter foe of the welfare bill would take the podium here.

Even so, the Republicans' post-convention surge is beginning to fade. A Newsweek magazine poll yesterday put from their party has won a sec- Mr Clinton's lead over his Republican challenger Bob Dole at 7 per cent, up from only 2 per cent immediately after San

> The divided loyalties within the Democratic Party have not been lost on Mr Dole, who has tried to capitalise on them. "Just imagine what be'll do if he were somehow to win a second term - his liberalism unrestrained by the need to face the American people in another election," Mr Dole said.

After Chicago, Democratic planners hope the party's lead Two designated protest areas will be back in double figures have been set up close to the in- an insuperable margin if previ-

PENNY SHARES ARE BOOMING!

Discover how you could turn PENNIES into POUNDS with shares that cost less than £1 each.

Tr's a fact! Penny Shares could make you a fortune on | and you can discover the unique source of their knowledge the Stock Market. Last year the Stock Market's Top 10 when you return the coupon below. performing shares made an average gain of 424%. And 8 out of 10 of these amazing movers were Penny Shares!

Penny Shares are often in smaller companies - which is excellent news if you are about to invest. Our research shows that in the 3 years following the last two recessions, smaller companies (and therefore Penny Shares) out performed the rest of the market by a significant margin. It happened after the '74/'75 slump. It happened after the recession of the early '80s . . . and now, as we enter a period of dynamic economic recovery, the value of Penny Shares could continue to soar. So ask yourself - do you have the time it takes to comb the Stock Market week after week? Do you have the contacts who are close enough to the action to let you in on the most promising shares? And do you have the experience to recognise profit opportunities?

> TAKE CONTROL OF YOUR FUTURE WEALTH

Now you can seize this booming market for yourself. PENNY SHARE GUIDE is Britain's premier newsletter for tipping those smaller companies that show the most explosive potential for growth and profit. And you can claim your FREE issue

Step by step, share by share, PENNY SHARE GUIDE tells you when to buy, when to hold, and when to sell to minimise your risk and maximise your profits. Today, over 20,000 readers are getting regular supplies of this exclusive advice -

CLAIM YOUR FREE COPY OF PENNY SHARE GUIDE

And to help your investments even further, when you subscribe to PENNY SHARE GUIDE you'll receive 2 FREE gifts - 'The 13 Do's and Don'ts of Penny Share Investing' - a pocket guide that lifts the lid on the most successful investment techniques PLUS the unique 'Sharecall Directory' that lets you monitor the movement of over 2,000 shares any time, anywhere

* NEW OFFER *

'How to Buy and Sell Shares'.

in the UK. And if you respond within 10 days you'll also receive FREE Financial Times/Pitman Publishing Book worth £25 As a full subscriber to PENNY SHARE GUIDE you'll receive those 3 special FREE gifts PLUS a brand new edition of 'The Investor's Guide to How the Stock Market Really Works'. Published by the Financial Times/Pitman Publishing, this comprehensive investment manual would cost you £25 in a bookshop. You'll find full details of this new-reader offer with your free issue of PENNY SHARE GUIDE.

EXTRA EXTRA!

As part of our special introductory offer you'll get more than £30 off your first year's subscription to PENNY SHARE GUIDE - officially £59.50 you can read all 12 info-packed issues, plus your 4 free gifts for just £29!

CLAIM YOUR FREE COPY NOW

Prepare to be amazed by what you'll read. Take your first step into the exciting world of Penny Shares. Call FREE on 0500 823 873 NOW or simply fill in the coupon below (no stamp required) and get the latest issue of PENNY SHARE GUIDE ... ABSOLUTELY FREE.

Penny Share Guide, FREEPOST, NW3521, Edinburgh EH4 0FX. Vide price to anti-price, excluding desing costs and chadends. (Source: Datastesan Top 28 Roses 04/08/95/05/08/95/). The past is not processory a goode to finite performance. Interprit factor and it can be more difficult to realize each on investment. This investment is not matched for everyone if you have any doubt, you should obtain expent solves.

YES! I want to be a part of today's Penny Share profit boom! Please send me my FREE copy of PENNY SHARE GUIDE PLUS my FREE Penny Share market report pack and details of a special half-price offer for one year's subscription to PENNY SHARE GUIDE, including how I can claim my FREE investment book worth £25.

NAME:	/ N
ADDRESS:	_
Postcode:

Send to: Penny Share Guide, FREEPOST, NW3521, Edinburgh EH4 OFX (No stamp required).

FREEPHONE 0500 823 873

Approved by Pics States Publications Led. Regulated by the Personal Investment Authority, while on respect. If you do not wish to exactive further attractive offices from Piers States Publications Lad, or other carefully selected output international

Frail holy man's stand against the tide of progress

Himalayan blizzard kills pilgrims significant shorts

Hindu pilgrims, trekking to a sacred ice-cave in the Kashmir region of the Himalayas, have long had to contend with the threat of ambush by Muslim guerrillas. But this year was worse; the full wrath of the Himalayas struck the procession of 90,000 devotees as a freak snowstorm and torrential rain killed over 130 pilgrims.

Indian rescue workers battled against a blizzard and landslides

A solitary, frail, old man is standing in the way of the world's sixth largest dam pro-ject. Sunderlab Bahuguna lives in a tin shed overshadowed by the Tehri Dam in a steep Himalayan valley. When the dam is constructed, and the floodwaters rise, be will become its first victim. He is prepared to sacrifice himself rather than see his sacred river, the Ganges, dammed

The Ganges is the boliest of all the rivers of India. Hindus believe that it flows down from the coiled hair of Lord

Shiva. During the Cold War, it was enough for the Soviets to plant the false rumour that radiation had leaked out of a broken US spy installation into the Ganges for mobs to besiege the American embassy in New Delhi. The Ganges is also the source of life, and of hydro-electric power, for hundreds of millions of Indians as well as Bangladeshis, and some environmentalists claim that the long-range impact of the proposed dam could be

Although Bahuguna is revered as a holy man in the Garhwai foothills of the Himalayas, he is also well-versed in ecology. His main worry, which is shared by many prominent Indian geo-physicists as well as thousands of villagers down river, is that the 260-metre-high dam might collapse in an earthquake.

Tehri lies in an active fault zone, and an earthquake

which killed thousands several years ago in the nearby valley of Uttarkashimay has cracked to his shed saying: "If the Tehri dam bursts, a 260m-high column of water would wash away Reshekesh in just 63

minutes: 17 minutes later waters would reach flaredwar."

Both Reshekesh and

Bahuguna has nailed a sign a rock-filled dam wall.

and domesticated.

50 miles of sheer, ice-covered Anantnag, 60 miles from the breaks in the cloud yesterday, mountain terrain. Many pilgrims were seen carrying sick and dying relatives down to spots where they could be airlifted out by army helicopters.

Many sadhus, holy men, were among the dead. They had undertaken the gruelling mountain pilgrimage wearing nothing but ash smeared on their bodies. "The main reason for the deaths is that the pilgrims had no warm clothing. Many were old people. The holy men were to rescue 7,000 stranded pil- trekking naked," said a doctor grims who are strung out along at an emergency camp in

LOCAL

HEROES

Sunderlab Bahuguna

Haredwar are pilgrimage

towns on the Ganges with populations of more than

After authorities failed to listen to pleas by Bahuguna and other ecologists, the sep-tuagenarian Sadhu – or holy man - went on a hunger strike which lasted from April until the end of June. He sustained himself with a ritual bath in the Ganges, which he insisted gave him strength, and Himalayan honey and berry

juice. He called off his strike

after the new Prime Minister,

Deve Gowda, promised to open an independent inquiry

Bahuguna has the Hindu clergy on his side, as well as the people from 122 villages that will either be completely or partially flooded by the dam. But Bahuguna, the Ganges protector, also faces strong opposition. The Indian government has already sunk

over £220m into construction,

out of the dam's total cost of film. And, instead of fighting, many of Tehri's 25,000 inhabitants have opted for government compensation

and have moved out of the valley, which is soon to be submerged, to a new town on the summed up the resentment of many mountain folk last year

Prime Minister, Narasimha

Rao: "To build my ancestral

when he wrote to the then

Never the less, Bahuguna

into the dam project.

capital, Srinagar. The Hindu pilgrims had gone to worship at Amarnath Cave, 12,725ft up in the Himalayas, where an icicle is said to be a manifestation of the Lord Shiva's phallus.

Most of the victims were from the heat-scorched plains of northern India, ill-equipped to face the fierce Himalayan blizzard. The death toll may rise as more rain and fog strikes Kashmir, slowing rescue efforts. The Indian army has so far evacuated 30,000 pilgrims. Taking advantage of a few helicopters were able to land along the pilgrimage route, dropping off blankets, first-aid kits, and rescuing some of the injured. Despite landslides, troops moved up the mountain trail yesterday with extra food and stretchers. The 50-mile pilgrimage has been officially called off.

The steep, forested valleys near the ice-cave have been overnun by Kashmir separatists who have been fighting Indian security forces during the past six years. Muslim guerrillas last year set off two bombs during the pilgrimage, killing one of-ficial and injuring dozens of Hindu worshippers. To ease communal tensions,

Muslim militants this year vowed to leave the unarmed Hindu pilgrims alone. Once the first survivors of the storm staggered down the mountain and alerted officials, Muslim villacers rushed to save the stranded Hindus, taking them into their homes and giving them food and clothing.

Twice in this stark Himalayan landscape, near the pilgrims' kidnapped by Muslim rebels. Two Britons, one a schoolboy, were held captive for 17 days in 1994, while last year five Westerners, including Britons Keith Mangan and Paul Wells, were taken captive.

A Norwegian hostage was beheaded by the kidnappers, members of the Al-Faran group, and the other four may have also been killed last the testimony of one rebel leader who was seized by the Indian army.

A peace pact ending a 24-year Muslim rebellion in the southern Philippines is expected to be signed in Jakarta on 30 August, followed by a ceremonial signing in Manila on 2 September, President Fidel Ramos said. The presidential palace said he had invited Hamid Algabid, secretary-general of the Organisation of the Islamic Conference (OIC), to be a signatory. An OIC panel chaired by Indonesia is mediating the talks between Manila and the insurgent Moro National Liberation Front. The deal calls for the setting up of an administrative council in the southern Mindanao region as a precursor to a Muslim regional government. The country's 6 million Muslims regard the southern region as their ancestral homeland although they have become a minority in the area after decades of Christian migration. More than 125,000 people have died in the rebellion, which broke out in October 1972 after then president Ferdinand Marcos declared martial

Bodies piled up in mortuaries around Zimbabwe after the government dismissed public service workers who went on a week-long strike for higher wages. The Public Service Commission said on Saturday it had fired thousands of the strikers, including nurses, junior doctors, mortuary attendants, magistrates, customs officers and firefighters, for defying an order to go back to work. Bereaved relatives said they had been trying since Tuesday to get documents allowing them to bury their dead. The strike, a rare challenge to President Robert Mugabe, has disrupted international and domestic flights and forced many bospitals to handle emergencies only. At the weekend police arrested but later freed two leaders of the Public Service Association (PSA) representing the strikers. A PSA official said 90 per cent of the country's 180,000 civil servants had stopped work to press demands for wage increases of between 30 and 60 per cent. They say their pay has not kept up with inflation. Reuter - Harare

2.5

1000

Rape vic

do not no more tor

ar Labour 1900 oc

alked

A an obtained

Budian's

4.0.1.

$ Land the last of

A. William

gurne in a patentining of ausono a 🥾 🤈

mality and the co

alej, et i.

kahen i

addic same

William k

with DA Astron

a flu

to to the state and the thirty

QBSS in Tax

alibeli, i.e. is an throught trees

All decreases of the dateaday ...

bearing and and hedreads are to, but we the Particle dough profession

knormal part a livery

male me Lum

to totally major policy to the solicitor (1).

ighte and in the state of If the law year.

bent regardly

Geneising that sugar

gates and sure in haim, then there is a anothing above and ((v

Legal experts proming their and thei

fould break to a record

budament days to W

The popular to be but derime should have appropried to be the alma and suffering.

appropriate the state of the Shrined mil

Bedelendam to to to

garité la sent profit

Smild have treely are

When there is a correct below the transition of the transition of

Emple Prince to the back the Prince of the P

Adding a training to the

Similar heavening

MEASI MARKET

particular and proceeding the control of the contro

Million P. Block 198

off or H latte, production property of the second of the foreign to the second of the pare to the contract of a section of a section of the contract of the contract

atendition of sealing

Details II was a mista.

th_h m_e J_{h'}ai e tann

WI OILBI-KT

of the plant

क्या जुते. त

march and

Market Con-

Asouth African court passes judgment from today Aon a policeman who says he was apartheid's most effective killer. Eugene de Kock, who commanded a hitsquad unit and informed on his former operatives this year, faces 121 charges, from murder to arms offences, arising from three decades of trying to uphold white supremacy. Mr de Kock, 48, will be the highest-ranking apartheid security official to hear a judge pronounce his fate. The accusations included massacres and random killings, attacks on township hostels and trains, car bombings, torture, beatings and vendettas against fellow police. The judge in Pretoria's Supreme Court is expected to spend much of the week announcing the verdicts.

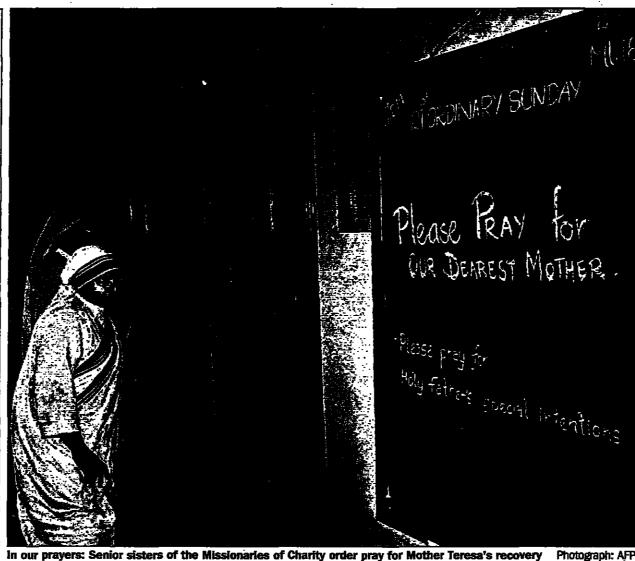

A Igerian authorities and opposition groups will hold a national conference, a milestone in President Liamine Zeroual's drive to reshape the country's future, in the "next few days", an official spokesman announced. Algeria has been seeking a way out of civil strife which has racked the country since the authorities in 1992 cancelled a general election in which the fundamentalist Islamic Salvation Front (FIS) took a commanding lead. An estimated 50,000 people have been killed. Parties involved in a preliminary committee meeting included the former sole ruling party, the National Liberation Front, two legal Islamist groups, Hamas and Nahda, and the secular anti-Islamist Rally for Democracy and Culture. The FIS is outlawed and was not involved. Reuter – Paris

Archaeologists in Egypt have found pots used by fancient Egyptians in burial rites that, they say, may reveal the secrets of mummification. Mohammet Saleh, director of the Egyptian Museum, said a US team found the pots, some of which contain intestines, in a tomb in Dahshour, 25 miles from Cairo. Dahshour is the site of Egypt's second-largest pyramid, built for the pharaoh Seneferu 4,500 years ago. One jar contained "substances Saleh said. Reuter - Cairo the multiple of colored.

The world and Olympic champion Alexander Popov, considered the world's fastest swimmer, was stabbed by watermelon vendors in Moscow. Popov, 25, who won two gold and two silver medals at Atlanta, was recovering after surgery. He was taking a woman home on Saturday when he got into an argument and was stabbed in the stomach.

AP - Moscow

Mother Teresa still critical

TIM WEGIRK

Mother Teresa's health stais not out of danger, doctors in and charity worker is still suffering from heart failure and a chest infection.

house and the fields, my mother carried earth and stones "Mother Teresa is still conover her head. There can be no scious, but she cannot speak. compensation for my mother's She is still hooked up to a respirator machine," a spokesman from the Woodlands Nursing Home in Calcutta said. "She can only breath with assistance." Attempts on Saturday to remove her from the life support machines were abandoned and lung specialists in Calcut-when she suffered a relapse. ta. Special prayers were said for

Her recovery has been ham-pered by recurring bodies of Fitted with a pacemaker, bilised slightly yesterday, but she Mother Teresa's weak heart cannot withstand the onslaught Paul's Cathedral, a Mass was Calcutta said. The frail, 86- of fever. Mother Teresa was vear-old Nobel Peace januage rushed from her convent to hospital on Tuesday night suffering from cardiac arrest. Doctors said that yesterday the fever subsided slightly.

"Her heart is now under control, but there is no appre-ciable change in her condition.'

the clinic spokesman said. "She is still very, very critical." Mother Teresa is being treat-

It was the only area where Muslims fought Muslims, when the clinic to wish for her ed by a team of the best heart recovery.

her yesterday at the many or ... thousands of calls from her ad-phanages and homes for leprosy militars around the world. But privately, some doctors said patients and dying homeless people which she has founded in Calcutta. In the city's St her chances of survival are slim. "We can't keep her on a res-

Mother Teresa to survive. A volunteer at the headquarters of Mother Teresa's charity work said that yesterday a Muslim cleric also came to offer prayers for her. Even the local Communist chief, Jyoti Basil who has been Mother Teresa's opponent as well as a grudging admirer, stopped by

The switchboard at the nursing home was jammed with

pirator for more than a week. held yesterday in which hun-Otherwise her lungs will fill up with fluid," said one doctor, who preferred to remain anony-

At one of Mother Teresa's homes for mentally retarded women, a cook, named Ka-mala, told a local reporter: "I have distributed food to thousands of people. They are so poor that they cannot even afford plates for lunch and must make do with plastic bags instead. If Mother Teresa can help them survive, why can't our

Bosnia's former victims are accused of poll terror tactics

Christopher Bellamy on the menace faced by opposition

politicians before voting day

Bihac - The appearance of tranquil normality has returned. only nine months after the end of a three-year siege during which the Muslim enclave was cut off by the Bosnian Serbs on one side and Serbs in the Krajina area of Croatia on the

A police lorry for towing away illegally parked cars trun-dled down the main street. "That's the ultimate normality indicator." joked one British army officer from the Britishled division responsible for this sector. The children who played as our helicopter touched down in a muddy field west of the town, beneath the mountains from which the Serbs had bombarded it, looked healthy and happy for youngsters who had grown up through three years

> But appearances are deceptive. The Bihac area has seen the most blatant intimidation and harassment of opposition candidates in the forthcoming elections anywhere in Bosnia.
>
> In the past two weeks there of darkness and despair.

have been eight beatings in police custody and 11 mysterious explosions, some of which have been directed at opponents of the Muslim SDA party of President Alija Izetbegovic. The acts pose a serious threat to the elections planned for 14 Sep-

An official of the UN's international police (IPTF), which monitors the Bosnian police, reported that the "level of intimidation" in Cazin, 12 miles north of Bihac, "was at such a level that because of it they [the electorate] may well not go to Bihac has a strange history. to go to the elections he was very pleased with the number of people who had registered to vote but was "less happy with the political atmosphere that is a rebel Muslim army under Fikret Abdic battled against developing".

"There have been a number Muslims loyal to the Sarajevo government, with help from the Serbs. The Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE), which is supervising the Bosnian elections, and the IPTF have highlighted incidents in Serb-controlled territory. But they place most stress on the authorities in Bihac. Yesterday, Abdic posters were plentiful. Although Mr Abdic faces war-crimes charges in Bosnia, he has not been indicted by the international criminal tribunal in The Hague and is eligible to stand for election under the Dayton peace agreement rules. Karsten Geter, deputy director of OSCE in Bihac, said that with three weeks They began with the death of a of incidents, especially in Cazin recently, in which representatives of basically all opposition parties have been targeted," he said. Another incident involved campaign material belonging to Zdruzena Lista BiH, the opposition coalition, which was confiscated by the police in Bihac and partly destroyed. The confiscation took place because the material was "against the in-terests of the ruling party". That is no way to run an election, Mr Karsten told journalists from the Muslim-Croat federation and the Republika Srpska, whom the Nato peace forces had brought down from Banja Luka into Muslim territory by helicopter. "I call on nose responsible for creating a positive campaign atmosphere to think about the image that this canton [one of 10 in the Muslim-Croat half of Bosnia] is projecting, if there are abuses of human rights and harassment of opposition politicians," he said. Although there were problems in Republika Srpska, they were not as bad as in Bihac, Mr Karsten said.

The IPTF reported disturbing incidents on both sides.

vacevic, in Serb police custody on 1 August after suffering 16 broken ribs and with a litre of blood on his lungs. A second case concerned Alexander Bar-ic, a resident of Sanski Most bian fighter] who was beaten by the local Muslim police. The IPTF had requested access to the prisoner, who was allegedly beaten for five days, but refused. It was alleged the Muslim police tried to make him confess to war crimes, which he denied. There appears to have been a systematic campaign against opponents of the SDA. One Ab-dic supporter was allegedly beaten in Bihac police custody, and a hand grenade thrown at his house while he was being

Last Saturday in nearby Ve-lika Kladusa the IPTF received a complaint from an Abdic supporter who said she and four others had been detained and told they should "not be so open in their affiliation to Mr Abdic. or they could face some conse-

In spite of international concern the elections are unlikely to be called off. The OSCE ambassador in Sarajevo bas said they would only be stopped in the case of a "major outbreak of violence".

Eight beatings and 11 bombings do not meet that criterion. A senior diplomatic source told The Independent yesterday: "You had a choice. Either this route - elections - or create a sort of international protectorate and have elections in, say, five years' time. They chose this house hotels in West Sussex, the Elizabethan Ockenden Manor in Cuckfield, the Spread Eagle Hotel, a 15th Century coaching inn in Midhurst and Bailiffscourt, If you don't win why not book a 2 night a mediaeval folly in

Climping are offering Spread East and dinner on one night

weekdays

10am-4om

Committed to excellence

Independent readers the To enter, simply dial the chance to win a luxurious number below, answer the break including two nights two questions on line and accommodation, breakfast leave your details. So call:

01582

MAY TO BUT

Men redjection in Later to be marked the agage tradition to the training Rain and the Land Made

t the Lange n Ole Conclude

Section of the state

cut it describe

Maria de mercas

ard to a Mir office

Million Marting

erstrate means in the seconds.

there the people of the state o

seekse in the market of alind Zumbabae ale

wake Palita

il had a ground

doctor material

to and to chicken

by the got chestrooms relative as any think the appeal

foreset many

At the weekens

dersolve Purk

mand news th

ent. The was then to

ement from today

purthers may

B. Cap throstopics 网络拉拉马马克 液

Report of the page

dian groups will have

gene Pro Statistica

Mark Hallon and Co

gignes at the contra

White the Assets

games floor in their

y American de San

plydd i 1965

nuch Egyd Long and Angel Military and Angel

THE WAY TO STREET

g pata used k

hiber of a 4-4

ik tear the great state of the state of the

on Alexander Papa

Marin and selective la w e i e e e e e ath or to be seen by

WBER THE PLE

NOM THE PROS

TO THE FUTUS

ne in R

hie et in in a comme

IST SEPTEMBER

Émiro de la companya della companya de la companya de la companya della companya ggaga - t. - t

- T

The State of Lines.

TANW LONDON

Market 1

gh (t.

Islam's Section

at open to the the ar other suppre dulin man and the contract much by the By the leader page

No more freedom for the Prison Service

The Harry Houdini of the Home Office does it again. A wave of buck-passing, confusion and administrative anarchy engulfs the Prison and Probation Services but one man stays dry, building his sand-castles of political ambition. It's Michael Howard, the minister who makes such a fine distinction between responsibility and accountability but who, when the flak flies, turns out to show neither. As they say among the criminal classes, Michael Howard is a man with form. Attempted IRA escape from Whitemoor, breakout at Parkhurst, the expensive sacking of Derek Lewis, the head of the Prison Service, a succession of reversals at the hands of the judges

... they hardly describe a Home Secretary who is well-advised and in competent command. Yet until last week Mr Howard had been having a good summer, in party political terms. The voluntary-until-the-police-and-Home-Office-deem-it-compulsory identity card was finally unveiled. While colleagues sunned themselves, the Tory Stakhanovite was fielding Labour's seasonal onslaught. But too busy with the politics, he did not seem to notice that a flood of prisoners was being released without warning or preparation or con-cern for their care (not that Mr Howard is keen on after-care).

cers Association took unilateral action. It happened because unnamed officials pressed the exit button. They overturned a 30-year understanding of what the law said about concurrent jail sentences and how time spent on remand should count towards total time in prison. Why did their legal advice (gathered on whose authority?) differ so much from Mr Howard's latest opinion, hastily written by David Pannick QC? It amounts to a cock-up, yet Mr Howard's accountability seems once more to be taking the shape of saying

"not guilty" because he did not know. Which makes the case for his dismissal even stronger. A home secretary should know. Were the Prime Minister more wedded to sound governance than petty party ie, Euro-sceptic bal-ancing, he would long ago have given Michael Howard his marching orders. But oddly enough this is not an occasion for rehearsing the case against the man. A new home secretary installed tomorrow would confront structural problems which Mr Howard may have exacerbated but is certainly not the author of. His successor, regardless of party, would need to buckle down to a reform of a public service the head and limbs of which do not seem to connect.

Reform of prison management has come and gone. Six years ago prisons And this was happening not because the Home Office had said so; not supposedly at arm's length from the because the hard men of the Prison Offi- Home Office. This turns out to have been a bureaucratic farce. (This failure has nothing to do with contracting out parts of the service, about bringing the private sector in, about bringing the Prison Officers Association to heel - all moves which have something to be said for them.) The naivety of the executiveagency concept was a belief that management could be divided from politics, executive from operational decisions.

ONE CANADA SQUARE CANARY WHARF LONDON E145DL TELEPHONE 0171-293 2000 / 0171-345 2000 FAX 0171-293 2485 / 0171-345 2435

Indeed, the most damning thing that can be said about the release fiasco is that it would have happened in much the same way had Derek Lewis been retained. There is something rotten in the secretive relationship between prisons and Home Office and it seems to have got worse, not better. Some in Whitehall had high hopes that Richard Wilson, the permanent secretary at the Home Office, would improve communications but his reputation, too, must suffer in this latest débâcle. Derek Lewis, who had been appointed to run the service from a private-sector background, was replaced by a civil service insider, Richard Tilt. Yet he seems to have forgotten the cardinal rule of keeping the minister informed. Mr Tilt has some searching questions to answer. The management of prisons will always be political. Depriving people of their lib-

state's power. Public concern about prison conditions and the nature of sentences, about escapes and releases, will always be high. Some do-gooders might wish the public to care less so that more prisoners might be transferred into less exacting regimes or released altogether. So, in prison, the line between what can safely be left to managers and what ministers need to know is never going to be fixed hard and fast. It was not when Merlyn Rees was Home Secretary (the last Labour example); it will not be when and if Jack Straw takes over. The Government's mistake - which is better laid at the door of Kenneth Clarke than Michael Howard-was to imply that prisons could be managed out of sight, out of mind. They cannot. The Home Secretary has to be in continuous contact with those responsible for the jails day to day. This is a fact of prison life, and will remain so regardless of how sentences are fixed or of how much flexibility courts and criminal justice system are given in disposing of convicted offenders.

Michael Howard - assuming the great escapologist gets away with it again - has two urgent tasks. One is to get behind this latest cascade of error. Who ordered the releases and why? If he can bring in retired army generals to conduct inquiries into escapes from Parkhurst, he surely needs to make a priority of establishing the line of command in his own backyard. The second erty is the ultimate expression of the is to abandon the flimflam of "executive agency" status, reabsorb prisons into the mainstream of Home Office administration and establish traditional reporting lines. Home secretaries cannot and should not be held responsible for every creak in the prison door nor even every disturbance on E wing. But they need to know, within an instant of that disturbance occurring, why and wherefore. Only then can they begin to perform the task of accounting to Parliament and public.

Better drivers? Pas du tout pritish motorists are shameless. BAccording to a weekend survey, huge proportions of them have not mastered even the basic French needed to read traffic instructions. Barely a third knew the French speed limit expressed in kilometres. But still they assert they are better drivers than those on the other side of the Channel - by miles. It is merely annoying that so many British drivers end up, cardless, in the Telépéage queues on the autoroute. But not to be able to recognise basic signs such as roadworks is positively dangerous. It would serve them right if a few more visits to centres d'entretiens accompanied by the gendarmerie took place as a result.

• LETTERS TO THE EDITOR •

Rape victims do not need more torment

Sir: Earlier this year I was attacked and raped at knifepoint by an intruder in my own home. The attack lasted half an hour. I had no visible injuries, but it shattered my life. Rape is not merely enforced sex. It devastates and destroys everything of any value and meaning. It is not just a particularly nasty crime - it's a crime in a league of its own, and the law should recognise this. The police have learnt and now understand more about the true It's about time our legal system did the same. My attacker is awaiting trial, with DNA evidence linking him to three other rapes. Until yesterday, if I had been told that he had the right to cross-examine me at length in court, regardless of any distress or suffering it caused me, I would have laughed in disbelief ("Rape victim's foul court ordeal", 23 August). Surely, this would make the law virtually an accessory to a further crime?

I've already suffered the ordeal of attending an identity parade. I knew my attacker couldn't see me, but seeing him at close quarters brought on a surge of terror and panic which almost made me faint and for which I was totally unprepared. He had his solicitor there to protect his rights and interests. I had no one.

If the law gives a defendant the right to cross-examine a victim in court, regardless of whether exercising that right is causing distress and suffering to the victim, then there is clearly something abysmally wrong with

Legal experts point out that withdrawing a rape defendant's right to defend himself in court would breach a most fundamental right. What is going on here? on nere?

The point is, he has rights. The victim has none at all. Any victim of crime should have the right to be protected from further trauma and suffering, and this right should be absolutely enshrined and protected by law. The defendant may or may not be guilty. The victim most certainly is not. Both parties should have rights, and both sets of rights should be regarded as equal.

When there is a conflict of interest between the defendant's rights and those of the victim, a compromise should be sought and found. A fundamental principle appears to be missing from the British justice system if it allows a rapist to torment and intimidate his victim in a court of

NAME AND ADDRESS WITHHELD

Sir: In my experience as a police doctor, acts of rape appear to be about domination, power and humiliation as much as sexual gratification, and it is the psychological damage which is usually the worst and longest lasting.

In allowing a victim to be crossexamined by her suspected assailant, the entire court was witness to a continuation of the very crime it was supposed to be hearing. Dr N J GILBERT Forensic medical examiner

UK ill served by book-learning

Sir: As a way of keeping kids off the street and youngsters off the dole, there may well be some merit in David Blunkett's suggestion that 85 per cent should gain at least five GCSE passes at grades A-C ("The case for improving the test", 22 August). However, Mr Blunkett is deluting the nation in insisting that deluding the nation in insisting that "our economic competitiveness depends on our matching the skills achieved by young people in countries such as Taiwan and Korea". It might bolster national morale for politicians to pretend that we can, by reading books, regain the position we fail to hold by making goods, but as the burgeoning unemployment and underemployment of graduates and YTS trainces amply testify, the bleak fact is that Britain is, in economic terms, already too clever by a third, if not by half.

Of course, it is arguable that it is better to be overqualified than underqualified. What is not quite so easily understood is that dangerous complacency in high places which leads Mr Blunkett, as t does Mrs Shephard, to imagine that having more and more youngsters sitting in libraries, lecture rooms and laboratories is a precondition for economic revival.

In last year's 3i survey of the UK's most successful independent wealth creators, two-thirds had never seen the inside of a university, whilst upwards of a quarter had, perish the thought, managed to benefit the country with an education that finished at GCSE. It would be a pity if Mr Blunkett should ignore the contribution to the country's economic well-being of those who are not all that interested in passing

Department of Educational University of Lancaster

Dr JAMES MURPHY

Sir: Simon Harrison (Letters, 16 August) misses the point when he writes that examination candidates are competing for opportunities. This is true, but it does not mean that the examinations themselves form the competition. An academic qualification is meant to show an individual's proficiency. In this respect, they are more like driving tests. Fixed thresholds between grades mean that employers and universities are able to ascertain the level of proficiency they would expect of a candidate who achieves a given grade. If an employer or higher education establishment is swamped with applicants who make the grades, they can always raise the minimum qualifications required, or look for other less measurable qualities in candidates: aspects of character which are every bit as important as academic qualifications. ALEXANDER MACFIE

Sir: The word "élitist" seems to crop up every time your writers quite different attitudes. Exclusive élitists want an discuss education. It covers two educational system designed for the benefit of the cleverest few per cent. Not guilty, m'lud, and I know very few educators who are. Missionary élitists believe there are real advantages to a style of thought that is historically associated with a small minority, and they want it distributed as widely as possible. Guilty as charged, and so are most of my

Abergavenny, Gwent

The style I believe in assumes the right to query what claims mean, explore their implications, test them, and improve on them - and knows you can't do that unless you criticise and develop your own thought processes. It is intimately tied to research, which is why missionary élitists want students heavily exposed to people who are active in research. If I am overawed by received wisdom, how can I teach my students not to be?

The third party are the paternalists who think most of the poor dears need something easiermemorise passages from a pasteurised text, rote learn a few procedures, follow the instructions on the coursework pack. Those people thrive on popular suspicion of "élitism". RODDY COWIE

Sir: If more students pass in Alevels and GCSEs then standards are slipping. If fewer students pass, that definitely proves that standards are slipping. Modular tests allow students to retake as they go - thus standards are slipping. Now we hear the markers are to blame for being too lax, further proof that standards are slipping. However the results go, bad or

Post letters to Letters to the Editor, and include a daytime telephone number.

(Fax: 0171-293 2056; e-mail: letters@independent.co.uk) Letters may be edited for length and clarity.

bad (for according to some there are never any good results) some commentators will continue to say "standards are slipping". MICHAEL G H ROWDEN Bath, Avon

Le Strange did only our ceiling

Sir: In his cheerful feature on Hunstanton's biggest ever birthday party (17 August), Bob Carter tells us that Henry Styleman Le Strange designed the nave of Ely Cathedral in the 19th century. Unfortunately, Le Strange missed this particular honour by a few hundred years: the nave of Ely Cathedral is Norman. He did, however, design the ceiling of the nave, which was painted in the last century. He painted the first six bays, with assistance, himself. He then died and his friend Thomas Gambier Parry completed the work. The ceiling is well worth seeing but, as I suspect Henry Styleman Le Strange would be the first to admit, the real glory of the nave is the Norman architecture. Canon JOHN INGE

Tell me what Labour is for

Sir: How ironic that in a page-long interview ("We need substance, not style, Prescott tells Blair", 16 August) John Prescott didn't actually refer to any of Labour's

"principles and ideas" and still less the "substance" – the presentation of which he disagrees with. How many more opportunities to explain what they really stand for are Labour going to blow before the British public vote in the Conservatives for a fifth term purely out of exasperation and apathy engendered by Labour's shoddy PR campaign? I am 25 years old and although I voted Conservative in the previous general election, I am now just as keen as anybody to ensure that a proper alternative - one that believes in and cares for this country and all its people and their interests – is voted into office next

Two years ago I would have happily voted Labour in a general election purely to get the Conservatives out. Now I know less about what Labour stands for than ever. I'm not surprised that Clare Short is disillusioned - that Tony Blair saw someone as tenacious and honest as her as a liability speaks for itself.

As long as they're not the Conservatives I don't particularly care who wins the next election, be they Liberal Democrats, Greens or Monster Raving Loonies. I might even consider adding Labour to that list if they would only give me something to believe in. PAUL COOPER Twickenham,

Middlesex

Start at the top Sir: Would not the country benefit from the formation of a Penal League for Howard Reform? London W13

America rates Britten highly

Sir: While vacationing in the UK, I was extremely surprised and annoyed to read your article denigrating the accomplishments of the late Benjamin Britten "Queen's musician in attack on Britten", 26 July). It contained an endless number of absurd statements by none other than the Master of the Queen's Music, Malcolm Williamson.

In American musical circles, Benjamin Britten is one of your most highly regarded composers, and rightfully so. He is ranked with the very finest 20th-century composers. Why Dr Williamson believes that Britten's private life will eventually destroy his stature as a composer is incomprehensible. If this were so, I fear that many more composers would have been lost to us by now.

I do believe that the Queen might be better served by the Master of the Queen's Music if she would reconsider his appointment and make him Master of the Queen's Sheep. If put out to pasture, he would fit in well with all the other bleating. JOHN TRUDEAU Music Director and Conductor Columbia Symphony Orchestra Portland, Oregon, USA

Whitehall wedded to car culture

Sir: Your leading article (22 August) is headed "Motor pollution is an issue for local will", yet Nicholas Schoon's analysis overleaf demonstrates that the major solutions need to be addressed at national level. John Gummer appears to have carried out a hasty PR exercise devoid of much practical action other than passing the buck to the local authorities, as in the Transport Green Paper. Derek Osborn's optimistic analysis is also too hopeful by far: in reality other government departments are dismissive of Department of the Environment intentions. One only has to look at the strange interpretation of DoE policies which the Department of Transport presented as evidence on sustainable development to the Heathrow inquiry, as evidence instead that the DoT will not be moved from its role of industry promotion. Add to this the fact that the Department of Trade and Industry has been giving subsidies to car manufacturers to produce more cars, while trying to attract inward investment". There is no substitute for a comprehensive strategy to make the maintenance of our basic materials for breathing and living a first priority for government, rather than the pursuit of wealth. GORDON GLASS Director 2020 Vision Ltd Baih, Avon Sky highway Sir: Charles Arthur is too quick in dismissing BSkyB's plan for a satellite Internet connection ("The digital road", 24 August). As a typical home Internet user, only a few per cent of my connect. time is spent sending requests for information or e-mails to the Internet. The majority of the time is used in receiving the huge text, graphics and sound files that come back. What could be better than a three-lane motorway in one direction and a cycle path in the other, when most of the traffic is going one way? W I PRICE E-mail: BillyPrice@aol.com

Cycle logical warfare

A close encounter with Reclaim The Streets, the "notorious urban guerrilla group", reveals the pushers of pedal power are really peddling empowerment unappealing part of south London - so I carefully park my car remaining 200 yards. Well, you don't want to start off on the wrong foot, do you? And getting this interview has been a bit of a struggle. Many phone calls have been made, and not a few dusty conversations have ensued with women called

Theba and men called Dave, most of whom make it clear that they have little time for newspapers, profiles and journalists. But at last a nice-sounding young woman called Katherine

The door to 140 is opened by and brakes catching on my with a butterfly-shaped perspex window. In the room itself are all the familiar objects you'd expect in a kitchen, but in far from familiar form. Photos of family hang from a drooping

an extraordinary kitchen.

has agreed that a meeting might

the anti-car cause fairly.

on going to meet my painted many colours in the three Reclaimers at num-ancient past, and there is a hole ancient past, and there is a hole ber 140 Somewhere St in the ceiling above the sink. a small, paint-peeling, Alongside an old article on dirty-windowed address Art, Action and Automobiles abutting a railway bridge in an pasted on the wall is a tapestry outside number 70 and hoof the ist theory for beginners". Odette ushers me into a painted cane chair, which creaks ominously beneath me, and she smilingly offers tea. Soon, Katherine and Brian arrive. Katherine is dressed in old-style cycle shorts (not those labia-hugging horrors of the disco world) and white polo shirt. Brian, in his late 20s, is scrubby-bearded, sandalled easy to caricature, since he is also the most intense and didactic of the three.

Home Sweet Home sample

The very first thing I say (that be a good idea, and that it is I want some personal backconceivable that I might treat ground for an article, which will not simply deal with the mechanics of Reclaim The a willowy young white woman Streets) leads to a long adjournwith dreadlocks. From behind ment in the back garden, while her peep two lovely looking children of about six and three, what they all feel about this; I am left to finish my tea in the both exhibiting the fearless creaky chair. When they come curiosity that the kids of careful and affectionate parents back they have arrived at a deciseem to have. Odette leads me sion, but somehow I never find past a jumble of old bikes in the out what it is, and none of us narrow hall - the handlebars ever mention it again.

over-large stomach - and into o here I am, facing three Sactivists in what one national press agency has In its jumbled lack of modernity it resembles those old phodescribed this weekend as a tos of the inside of Highland "notorious urban guerrilla crofts just after the First World War. Only the frame remains of the kitchen door, while the in Brighton, where 75 Reclaimers were nicked when they backdoor out to the ramshackle garden is made out of plywood, blocked a roundabout.

This language characterises Reclaim The Streets as being of a piece with the anti-industrial terrorism of the Unabomber, and heirs to the tradition of the Weathermen, the electrical cord, the few remain-ing floorboards have been Symbionese Liberation Army and a photocopy of "situation-

group". because they were edly and en masse in busy cuss whatever they want to, behind Saturday's disturbances streets during rush-hour, and including future actions. hold street parties. The result is gridlock for motorists, a jolly day for residents and a big point made about how the motor car is ruining our cities and our lives.

But how do they do it? It must, after all, take formidable organisation and military-style discipline? Not at all, says Odette. Every week there's a and the Angry Brigade. Am I meeting at the group's head-scared? Not a lot. meeting at the group's head-quarters in a decrepit part of I know what they do. I tell central London. Between 70 them. They turn up unexpect- and 80 people turn up and dis-

"There's collective responsibility and no hierarchy," she says, "and no pre-established power structure." "Oh yes," I say, "so how do you stop the single-minded and the blokes from taking over?" The two women give Brian a funny little look, and he blushes and grins. "We do runarounds, so that everybody gets to talk," Odette replies, "but it doesn't always work."

So what happens is this. A local group might decide that it wants to call a "street party". It will liaise with others in the network who might be able to help with advice, transport or equipment. On the appointed day marshals with armbands will lead up to 400 cyclists and foot-sloggers (a "critical mass") from a meeting point to a pre-arranged spot. Trucks carrying sound equipment, "tripods" (scaffolding which can carry several demonstrators) and bouncy castles will get there at the same time. The police, or the past week or so in Edinburgh otherwise sane neonle edging up to me in conversations at the bar or even elsewhere and saying, "So who do you reckon for the Perrier Award then?", and I have had to say to them in all honesty, "Frankly, I don't give a toss who wins the Perrier Award, because it's the biggest waste of time since...", at which they edge away, believing me to be slightly mad, and so they

miss the end of my sentence

which is, "the biggest waste of time since they invented the Man of the Match Award in cricket, which has been the most pointless exercise since

Miss World, which in turn...".

any point in the Perrier

Award at all except to a) sell more Perrier, b) give per-formers something to talk about in the second week of the Fringe, when conversation is beginning to flag, and c) give comedy an importance out of all proportion on the Fringe. It doesn't put more bums on seats, it does-

But I really cannot see defeated, will find themselves looking at a thoroughfare seized. After an estimated turned in seconds into a pedestrian precinct full of partygoers. This is an action whose grandmother was Greenham Common, and whose parents were Raves and Convoys.

The police, the three assure me, are not amused. Had I heard of the Forward Intelligence Team at Scotland Yard? This is a 15-person squad (led raided and all the computers £46,000 of repairs had to be carried out on the M41 - a tiny strip of motorway in west London - following a street party, the police were looking for evidence of a conspiracy to cause criminal damage. "But what is going on in Newbury is criminal damage to the planet," argues Odette. I ask them what their philos-

The day you give up the car is the day you start living by a Barry Norman - and very nice too), dedicated to building up a profile of activists, preting their behaviour and pre-empting their activities. Members of FTT, they claim, follow them home and harass them for silly offences, like no bike lights during the day. "They follow us in vans," says Katherine, "and when we come to places where vans can't follow, they let down a ramp and come after us on mountainbikes." In addition the offices of RTS have recently been ophy is, and they reply that it is direct action". I protest that this isn't a philosophy, it's a tactic. No, says Brian, it's about empowerment. If people take direct action of one sort or another (occupying closing schools, living up trees, attending a street party), the very taking of it transforms their situation, as though a light-bulb had suddenly gone on in their heads. It works this way, according to Katherine: "People come to the group initially because they are anti-car. And then they see

For sure, the Irish can tell a jeauke

Brian. Worse, it has destroyed communities; made us turn our backs on our neighbours and retreat. Odette agrees vigorously. She wants smaller, selfgoverning, self-sufficient, human-sized communities - "a new way to live on this earth". But do people always want to experience community life? Close communities can be smothering, nosy, normative things and places and make choices we never had before?

But it has imprisoned our children in their homes and poisoned the air of our cities, says

We may have to wait for a whole generation to die off places, where the unusual or dynamic is treated with suspicion. I am examined with almost psychiatric scrutiny. Not all communities are dysfunctional." says Brian, missing my point. Which is strange, because he himself has escaped from a post-industrial community in the North-west, and become part of a much looser one - consisting of comrades and other activists - in a carbound urban jungle.

For him, however, it was a generational rebellion. "We may have to wait for a whole me. "The post-war boom, patriotic, glorious England lot. The eration of Brian's mum and dad, I suspect - the generation without soul, which has lost touch with itself, which hasn't yet realised that more doesn't make for happier, or that independence cannot be a substitute for inter-dependence, and which cannot work out why it is so unhappy, so alienated and so bloody anxious. I shake hands, brush my paunch on the Raleighs and slink back to the car. Much that Odette, Brian and Katherine have to say seems slightly barmy. Some of the things they do must be intensely irritating for those affected. But there is something here - there are some important truths about the way we live today. And, just as significant, they have somehow managed to brush away the disabling cynicism of the age, and come to believe that they can actually make a difpeople, allowing us to see ference. Perhaps they can.

Alice's Diary For a Cat Lover 19.95 inc pap Over 16,000 delighted readers from uround the world have already bought this wonderful book which tells of a year or the life of a mixed tably cat called Ahea. She records the year's events and donaters with great humour and imagist and at long last gives us a glumpar of what it a really like to be a call Delightfelly illustrated throughout, this book is an almohate must fer eat lower everywhere.

Our files are burstung with letters from confirmed fans who write and tell us how match they have chyoyed this book.

"I bought Alica's Diary which was read and re-read by young and old a of my family said greatly enjoyed" (E. M., Cheshire) "It is a delight(a) book and I thoroughly enjoyed it"
(M.E., Sunderland)

'Pirate send capies of Alice's Diary to the eleven friends on the accumpant list. It is a wonderful book that will give them all great ploasure" (Mr R., Lancashure)

The Village Cricket For a Cricket Lover

This superb wovel tells the story of a team of semitors exclutees who spend two weeks of their seminer holidays on tour in the Vest Country. It proves to be a most ovential fertinglet and the story describes the team's glones and disasters as they play their way remail the picturespite contains of Dovon and Corqueill. They struggle to cope with bearing patches and geotuber opponents and excounter subterfage and dishonesty during their tour. A marvellous gril for a cricket lover. Over 10,000 copies sold. "The only word to describe (this book) is bilarous. It is the formiest book about Three Men in a Boat and Vernou Coleman's style is very similar to that of crouse K Jerome. Anyone interested in cricket will find this book irresistible

"I rejuyed it immensity. He has succeeded in writing a book that will entertain, a book that will amose and warm the cockles of thred old hearts" (Peter Tinnswood, Punch)

We've ye've The

We will mail your presents for Birthdays, Amiversaries, Mother's Day, Father's Day, Easter, Christmas or for

The Man Who Inherited a Golf Course For a Golf Lover £12.95 inc pap Trever Dukmilehl, the here of this nevel, wakes up one morning to discover that he is the proud owner of his very own golf clob - fairways, buthers, clubbouse and all. This mempected present lends in Trever's lap as a result of a distant uncle's Will which he discovers, to his dismay, cutatants averal surprising clusters. To there the clob he must win as unportant match - and he's never played a sound of golf in his life!

The Man Who Inherited a Golf Course" tells Trever's stary as he buttles to save his subscitutes.

"Hugely enjoyable, in the best tradition of British comic writing." (Everang Chromele)
"This secondle is talker made (or Vernon Calentus's light and amoning anecdates about country life and purvaits. His funs will hap it up. (Sunday Independent) O Publishing Home, Thinky Paul, Technique, Despu (2012 W): Tel (0127) | 128802

How to place an order - and claim your free gift! Simply complete this form (block capitals please!) and send it with your cheque or postal order to: Sales Office (N-12, Publishing House, Trinity Place, Barnstapia, Devon EX32 9HJ, UK, Please make cheques/POs payable to "Publishing House". For credit card sales release teleschesses payable to "Publishing House". For credit card sales please telephone 01271 32892 Monday - Friday 8.30 - 5.30. We am to despatch with: 48 hours but please allow 21 days for delivery.

would like to order these books (meet comber remined to boucs) The Village Cocket Tour £9.95 Alice's Djary 19.95 The Man Who Inherited a Golf Couse £12.95

Perfect

We specialise in producing quality books at sensible prices. We can post out books for you anywhere in the world by surface or air We can gift wrap your presents free of charge and will also enclose your letters and gift cards.

any other special event.

Solve your present buying problems by choosing from this selection of superbly jacketed, hardback books by bestselling

PEACE OF MIND GUARANTEE

All our books come with a nock-solid, money-back guarantee which means you can order without risk. If you are unhappy with any book you order from it then simply return it to us in good conflicts whitis 28 days of receipt and your money will be acfunded in fail.

"Version Coleman is a very leany writer" (This England) "Dr Coleman's books are like a ray of sumshine on a dark dav"

story order "Dr Coleman is a (D. V., Plymouth)

n't mean anything much out-side Edinburgh, and I suspect it probably doesn't even sell any more Perrier. Do you think retailers all over the country are stockpiling cases of Perrier because today they are going to be stampeded by comedy fans? And that offlicence managers everywhere will wink and say, "Aha, they must have judged the Perrier over the weekend!"? I doubt

Nor will Bill Bailey be feeling very happy. Comedian Bill Bailey was the hot tip for the Perrier this year. I heard hundreds of identical conversations that went like

"Have you heard that Bill Bailey is hot favourite for the Perrier this year?" "Meaning that he hasn't got a hone?

"Exactly." On Saturday evening, hours before the winner was announced, I had avoided the Perrier hoo-ha by going to see one of the comedians on at the Pleasance, a young Irishman called Dylan Moran, who was said to be one of the best of the new crop of funny men from Ireland. They were right. He is. Not only has he got oodles of soft Irish charm and a wicked look in his eye as he gently sways around the stage with a glass and a cigarette, not only has he got a keen eye for the idiocies of Irish daily life and the real world as well, but he has a poetic gift for the slightly fey end to a joke.

Miles Kington

Explaining his fondness for smoking and drinking, for example, he said simply, "It's how I am. If I gave it all up, I would bleed. Not an obvious comic line, but it got a huge laugh. Elsewhere he talked about something that was "so boring it almost where he complained about our banality in describing aches and pains and accidents, and said to us: "Instead of saying, 'Oh, what happened to her was that she fell over when she was drunk and hurt her thigh...', why don't we freshen it up and attained spirituality". Else-that it is connected to so many voting. "Government is the sersays Brian. "It keeps profits flowing to the business class."

This latter group has, says

Brian, enticed all of us into dependence upon their products, gulled us into con-

r, is it so simple? Aren't we the real culprits, with our love of the freedom and independence that the motor car (I think fondly of the Toyota sitting outside number

70) bestows upon us? Odette gives me a brilliant and sympathetic smile. "I drove until two years ago," she admits, "but the day you give up your car is the day you start living — the day

you live life on the streets, the day you start to meet your neighbours." For her, rather more than for the slightly Marxian Brian, it is a matter of per-

the mobility the car has given

OK, I argue, but what about sonal responsibility.

sumerism, co-opted us into its war against the planet.

say, 'Oh, what happened was that she fell over when drunk and hurt her thigh and opened an antiques shop'?". Now, this sort of thing baldly written down may not be world-shaking, and if that were all his act were it would not be either, but added as a sort of soft Irish mist to an already good outline, it works wonders. There are some very sharp lines ("I was educated by priests. They taught everything, even sex education, which was rather a hands-on experience...") but mostly it's all charm and word magic.

As my own show was due to start in less than an hour, I had to creep out before the end. The next day I heard that Dylan Moran had won the Perrier Prize overnight. This meant two things. It meant that I felt very sorry for Bill Bailey and it also meant that I had become probably the first person to walk out of a Perrier Awardwinner's show on the day he is crowned. Of course, if you take the Perrier seriously, it also means that Irish comedy is even more on the up and up. Remember when the Irish joke was the funniest thing an Englishman could think of? This said more about the English than the Irish, who had always had more of the gift of the gab than the English, but the wheel of fortune has certainly come half-circle with the emergence of Irish stand-ups like Sean Hughes and Dylan Moran. And yet, and yet ... I wonder if the Pertier will do anything good for Dylan Moran. Ten years ago I was on the Perrier judging panel. That year it was won by another Irishman, Ben Keaton. And where is HE now?

If I find out the answer to this in the next 24 hours, I will let you know tomorrow.

smentagen a day Man lake dwale a concil with the bear Belleany bear to a title hare, replaced the re-dental and symbolic at their bulle Area It was in dahumanel tuttem! of man and a sec. post man and Comprise the line arte All Print Devent Bright 31 14 le had hederian. gall the of the west to Replied Continue and a chilarating in hater conduct the designist skills at $\mathcal{P}_{\text{plk}^{(2)}}$ and intuiting Kport CHA betrate 4 the Militari birniline (1) Post of tenders the absolutely etta billing discourse of the billing discourse of by purposed the May May Cast of Million Land delive which with it d manufacture hight.

Amore if the second

Address (Co.

The police of Strategy.

Undit is

Zezgan pod

electronic for the Comment

Edingues (1997)

Albania de la companya della company

Bu sinda i mila

ardred, " at j.

Libour alternative test

Calculation of the mouth in it.

Path company the control interfaces $W_{H_1 \cdots H_{r-1} \cdots H_{r-1} \cdots H_{r-1}}$

General Physics and

Bring with mapopen support

objective to have promoted the hominterruption iii. a

However the Copy

dom to not the liver of

Limits on classical of top advertising

THE

Lage and there is

Fluence, in the

polety then will diverse

there token by mill than to dominate v

Montague partition in control the new californ and carried to decoded to the m

Miller of the state of the stat

a the old control

SALE MARKOGET A STATE OF STATE

charginal designs

the commentators

As polling day approaches in Britain and the United States, politicians are pulling their usual tricks. Independent columnists warn of dangers for the public, parties and press

Conning the media

warning of the politicians' effrontery as they get close to an election was provided by the Republican convention in San Diego earlier this month. Here was a great political party, whose dull can-didate. Bob Dole, was trailing President Clinton by 20 points. The question was how it could best engineer a recovery by using the wonderful selling opportunity provided by an hour of prime-time television on four consecutive days.

And the state of the state of the copy of challenge

do then be not and a

The tree actions

al Character and

#1 Star - Contemps.

THE VENT OF MALLONE

CORPORATE CONTRACTOR

We may

ave to waith

rinie gareng

the free

distribution is

He is a second and the second second

kaya l

407 ation for

Superior Contract

eare do

garage As S

TAT IT

r=1 . un interior de la companya del companya del companya de la compan

this the c

e dina di mari

the state of

gg to garanti.

ante "

german 19 mil

Lar. mile.

white to me

y pagament of the

and the state of

த் நி.க்.^{சி.}

Marie Contract

State of the second

a the set

(tajisina 🗥

dia Mari

ந்தன் நிரும்

PRI MILLER

Wide Co.

i ima

141 . 1

Both Both

ъ́нг "" pri ...

ar production

រ រា

1. : 117 ...

Part .

The party managers knew exactly when the networks would screen live coverage of the convention each evening, so they decided to control what happened to the last second. Market research and daily polling had also indicated what House of Lords with Labour's the public apparently wanted. So Mr Dole was persuaded to put forward tax and budget proposals of the kind he had spent a lifetime in Congress denouncing, and his running mate, Jack Kemp, ditched his liberal opinions regarding affirmative action and immigration. That achieved, the Republican Party managers then set about creating an "infomercial" so that the 15,000 journalists sent to cover the nomination would be bypassed.

Speakers' scripts had to be approved - the Republican governor of California refused this humiliation and was denied the rostrum. Applause was graduated and carefully rehearsed. Neither supporters nor opponents of abortion were given a hearing even though the issue is as important to Republicans as Europe is to the Conservatives. The far-right champion, Pat Buchanan, who obtained 3 million votes in the primaries, was silenced. Protest groups were lot and each given precisely 55 minutes to make their presentation, at which point the microphones were switched off.

The networks, eyes open, knowing they had been had, ran this contrived event exactly as it was presented. The Fourth Estate was nullified. Mr Dole's ratings jumped 10 points.

Could Tory or Labour party managers pull off a similar marketing triumph here? They have the desire and understand the techniques. They likewise start with market research and polls. They similarly simplify the proposition being put to voters. Labour already suppresses debate and dissent and the Conservatives will surely attempt to do so. Both will tightly control their annual conferences. When we get to the General Election itself, public meetings will be all-ticket affairs for obedient supporters. The party managers' single-minded objective is to prevent the media from interrupting the message. However, the United Kingdom is not the United States. Limits on election spending keep advertising expenditure media must force it open.

well below American levels. The party conferences in their present form cannot be boiled down into an hour's infomercial each day. TV news programmes are unlikely to be captured by the political parties.

Of course the media do routinely my to interrupt the message. For example, at midnight last Tuesday on radio news the BBC led its story on Maurice Saatchi's elevation to the protests. We were thus informed of the reaction before we were given the news even though the item was absolutely fresh; midnight was the time fixed for the announcement. A similar technique is to suggest a "split" or "damaging gap" whenever a politician departs from a word-for-word rendering of party policy.

Both these approaches, often distortions of balanced reporting, are ways of challenging political marketing campaigns. Frankly neither achieves very much.

But there is a movement of great promise under way. This is the detachment of traditional Tory newspapers - the Daily Express, Sun and their Sunday counterparts - from the Govodically attacked since the last election. This change gives hope that for the first time this cendecline to become propaganda during the next election campaign. Whether any one of them will actually recommend readers to vote Labour or Liberal Democrat is impossible to guess. But it would be a tremendous gain if they at last gave up the role of Tory megaphone.

It is also important that newspapers and broadcasting companies try to widen the debate well beyond the narrow bounds set by the political parties. The list of subjects not debated during a general election campaign is extraordinary.
Here are some questions that will be neither asked nor chance of winning power? Sudanswered unless the media denly Democrats are champiraises them: should the proportion of national wealth devoted to defence continue to run well ahead of what, say, Germany or Japan spends? What should be done about increasing poverty, the plight of nents ever did.
the young homeless and unemployment rates of more than 20 per cent in black communities? Should the UK go forward into of Europe? The party managers want to close down debate; the

Facing voters: the price of Clinton's success is a party with few beliefs. Without media vigilance, British leaders will avoid the big issues Fiona Hanson/PA

Bankrupt Democrats

or a party quietly confident it will retain the tions of recapturing at least one of the two chambers of Congress tury these newspapers may this November the Democrats decline to become propaganda are in quite awith shape. That is confined to an obscure parking sheets for the Conservatives the strange paradox of American politics as the party of Franklin Roosevelt, John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson gathers for its convention in Chicago today. Victory is within reach—yet what Bill Clinton and the Democratic Party stand for is a matter for the seers of ancient Delphi. Consider first the astonishing role reversal of the two major parties. If the bond market has been skidding of late, one reason has been the opinion poll bounce of the Dole-Kemp ticket. Could those Republicans ons of the status quo and the darlings of Wall Street, while Republicans, touting child tax credits and a 15 per cent acrossthe-board tax cut for all, sound more populist than their oppo-

In part, of course, the President is bowing to the inevitable. America is shifting rightward - and he knows it. True, he may be credited with fostering a new post-Cold War consensus across the US political establishment, based on a reduced role for government, free trade and "family values". But these are traditionally Republican issues and Mr Clinton's tactic, so successful thus far, has been to smother his opponents - co-opting their popular ideas such as welfare reform, law and order, even a balanced budget, and demonising the rest as callous extremism. The latter category embraces Republican plans for education and the environment, but above all what Democrats dishonestly portray as the Republican goal of "slashing" Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security.

No matter that the "cuts" are a reduction in, not a reversal of, future growth in entitlement programmes which must be adjusted if the budget deficit is not to soar early in the next century, as babyboomers reach retirement. The President was a closet Republican, Bob Dole the Democrats reply with an ad trial workers lured by the siren Gingrich superimposed on the Oval Office, and a voice-over making clear that continued Clinton was the last hope of preventing decency disappearing completely from the country's governance. By the lights of an election campaign, the policy is working. But if so, the Democrats have their opponents to thank for it - Mr Gingrich's singular achievement in turning himself into the most unpopular politician in America during his first year as Speaker, the Republicans' crass obsession with overturning even minimal gun control, and their travails with abortion. Democratic policies are almost entirely lacking, even though the President will paper over their absence by unveiling "30 to 40" initiatives during convention week. Mainly, though, self-definition for the party consists of saying what it will not do. And even in this unanchored age, aimlessness can only go so far. In the basic stuff of politics, the war of ideas, they are outgunned by the Republicans.

The old Democrat core coalition of minorities, liberals, mocked at a campaign rally in New Jersey last week: "Give old industrial belt and Southblue-collar workers from the him 10 minutes and he'll prob-ably show up here." To which two components: the indus-

that sums up their entire re- call of the suburbs and transelection strategy: a malign formed into Reagan Democrats, and the South in the so doing he has opened himself process of a historic secular switch to Republicanism, set in motion by the Johnson civil occupancy of that room by Bill rights legislation of the 1960s. More than half the population lives in the suburbs; they are now the citadel of Republicanism.

Plainly, transformation of the party is required; but com-pared with changes in the Labour Party in Britain, it has been modest indeed. Clinton won election as a "New Democrat". Yet he governed for his first two years as an Old Democrat, committed not simply to consolidating government but to expanding it - culminating in the health-care reform disaster that preceded his party's mid-term rout in 1994. Then came the tactical shift to the "triangulation" espoused by his newly favoured political strategist Dick Morris, of a midway course between the Republicans and his own Democratic minority on Capitol Hill. Welfare reform, however, has only laid bare the limits of this approach. Last week, for purely electoral reasons, Mr Clinton agreed to sign a Republican-driven measure on which, he acknowledged, he had "grave doubts". Faced with liberal uproar at the party's abandonment of guaranteed federal assistance to poor children, in

Report from the P files

Think of the odder topics of news stories this month: we have had pen-guins (both boardroom dealings in the biscuits and proposals to bar-code the flippered ones), prostitutes (legalising them and illegalising their calling cards), phone numbers and life on other planets. What they all have in common is, of course, the letter P.

Was this all, in the first two weeks of P-registration cars, a marketing device by the motor industry? We have done some

1-14 Aug 64 104 88.0 751 707.6 266 57.2

The table lists, in the first column, the number of articles in the national press over the first two weeks in August this year featuring each of the listed words. The second column is the fortnightly average over the past year.

Penguins, prostitutes and phones are all significantly ahead of expectations. But the rate of increase of abortions (included as a non-P word to act às a control) is far higher. Yet the Abortion figure is only a byproduct of the Pro-life lobby The word "Pro-life" featured 81 times in the fortnight compared with an average of 5.4. The case for the P-bias seems very strong indeed. For a broader picture, we must compare appearances in newspapers during the first six months of this year with the Penguins and prostitutes have scarcely changed, with a rate of almost two prostitutes per penguin. Yuppies (acting as a statistical control for the prostitutes) remain almost constant. The most dramatic increase has been in ostriches (up 73 per cent) and squirrels (up 24 per cent). Moose are up 14 per cent. The 23 per cent drop in kangaroos is hard to explain.

The crucial test is the stories of life on Mars. Surely, if the automobile spin-doctors have been at work, it should have been Pluto in 1996 and Neptune in 1995 (year of N-registrations). In fact, Pluto sightings in July 1996 were indeed up to 12 from 9 the previous year, but in the same periods Neptune almost doubled from 13 to 24. We conclude that car registrations are not affecting the news.

place since FDR's New Deal.

the President then proclaimed

he would seek to modify it. In to Republican derision, while failing to quell unrest within his own party. Welfare reform will be the joker in the well-ordered

Chicago pack.
But Mr Clinton's handling of it is symbolic of much more - of the Democratic crisis and the conflict within the party

between what it would like to be, and what it has to be. If he is re-elected, a fascinating question arises: how would this politician, whose career has been an eternal campaign, govern when there are no more campaigns to be fought? Ideally san deal on social security and entitlement reform. But he will also have to make the New Democratic Party a reality.

Republicans will not have a death wish for ever.

he will work towards a biparti-

120 million acts of sexual intercourse will happen today.

But many millions of women across the world do not have the family planning they want to separate their decision to have sex...from getting pregnant. If you had sex and reproductive choice today, help us give more women the chance to choose.

POPULATION CONCERN HONGING INCOME

We're working for family planning and reproductive healthcare worldwide.

	Postcode
Address
Name	·
	nore information information on donating through Covenar pagets as appropriate	•
	·
Expiry date	Date
	ففقت مفقت محمد
-	☐ Access/Mastercard/Eurocard ☐ Visa	C
I enclose a don	ation to POPULATION CONCERN of £

THE CENTRAL FACTS FROM THE COURSES YOU ALWAYS MEANT TO TAKE, IN 25 LECTURES

Tu the small city-republic of Florence, in the years around 1400, a self-consciously new art was created, whose ideals and discoveries were to dominate western European painting until the advent of the modern era, five centuries later. The new art was confident and learned, and it was devoted to the imitation and representation of nature, on the basis of objective analysis. The old Gothic pictorial conventions were sloughed off. and an art linked with life, concerned with the beauty and emotional power of the human figure, replaced the transcen-dental and symbolic art of the Middle Ages. It was nurtured by a humanist faith in the dignity of man, and it seemed as though, after the darkness of centuries, the true art of antiquity had been reborn. Îts first historian, Giorgio Vasari, used the word rinascita (tebirth), evoking an optimistic and exhilarating newness. Painters emulated the fabled illusionist skills of ancient artists, and painting was once again envisioned as a triumphant progress to an ever more perfect replica of reality.

The absolutely crucial scientific discovery that underpinned Renaissance painting was undoubtedly the Florentine system of single-point perspective which, with the study of naturalistic light, enabled | But beyond, in a panoramic early Renaissance painters to achieve a totally new kind of three-dimensional illusionism and realism. A painting was likened to a view through a window, and Antonello da Messina's small panel St Jerome In His Study (c1475; London, National Gallery) seems to play on the theme of creating a world within worlds. We peer through a painted arch to the lovingly detailed scholar's study, but beyond lie further windows, and beyond them, a glimpse of the riches of the natural world. The clear daylight and the way in which the perspective emphasises the scholar's concentration convey a Renaissance admiration for learning and reason. Painting's new naturalism was enhanced by a study of anatomy, and a variety of new skills are displayed in Antonio and Piero del Pollaiulo's Renaissance showcase, The Martyrdom of St Sebastian (1475; London, National Gallery). In the foreground an ostentatiously balanced pyramid of athletic executioners demonstrates an exhilarating mastery of the human figure in complex action. The same figure is shown from different viewpoints, draped and nude; a taut and springing line conveys the vivid life of muscle and vein, and follows the play of sharp angles and curves.

Renaissance Art VISITING LECTURER: Helen Langdon

A final examination will be set at the end of term. All graduates will be awarded a diploma and the ten best results will receive a year's subscription to the Independent

The state of the s

view of the valley of the Arno, Antonio demonstrates other naturalist effects, creating atmospheric space through the soft play of light and shade that gleams on the river and fades on a distant horizon. To Vasari this naturalism of the 15th century rapidly came to seem a "dry, hard, harsh style", and it was eclipsed by the "inspired grace" and mon-umentality of the great 16th-century painters, Raphael, Leonardo da Vinci and Michelangelo, who were accorded a quasi-divine stature.

Art now aspired to an ideal beauty, that should surpass nature; 15th-century clarity yielded to the soft shadows of Leonardo, which created a mysterious and poetic vision, and the grandest of Raphael's Madonnas were both visionary and yet warmly human. For Michelangelo, man is raised to heaven by the contemplation of human beauty, and the heroic yet suffering and defiant male nudes of the Sistine ceiling suggest a yearning for a spiritual beauty that transcends reality.

Most Renaissance art was religious, but artists also evoked the lost world of classical antiq-uity. In Venice, poets and painters recreated the ancient dream of an Arcadian landscape, peopled by gods and shepherds, whose beauties offered refreshment and a natural eroticism. Such a landscape forms the setting for Titian's Bacchus and Ariadne (1520-30; London, National Gallery) in which the sensuous beauty of antique myth is radiantly brought to life. Inspired by Catullus, it shows the discovery of an abandoned Ariadne by the god Bacchus and his frenzied train. At the picture's cen-tre, Bacchus, "seeking thee Ari-adne and fired with thy love", leaps from his chariot, creating a sense of sudden revelation, of both the terror and beauty of the pagan world. A powerful nude grapples with snakes, evoking the newly discovered and celebrated classical sculpture, the Laokoon. The picture celebrates love, and glows with the rich beauty of precious pigments, setting the ultramarine expanse of the sky against earthy browns and greens. Titian invested the medium of oil on canvas with new strength, and Venetian colourism was to dominate European art in the following centuries.

In the modern era, the most revered Renaissance artists are perhaps those who used their skills for non-naturalistic ends; Uccello, whose passion for perspective created a highly unreal and fantastic world, and Piero della Francesca, who united an intense naturalism with a beauty of space and form.

Brian

Oddie

Brian Oddie had the unusual distinction of gaining an international reputation in two quite different fields, athletics and meteorology. He was educated at Luton

Grammar School and Queen

Mary College, London, where he took a degree in Physics which might have been even higher were it not for his running.

In athletics he represented

Britain on many occasions, running in the 1928 Olympic Games, in the 5,000 metres, against the legendary Nurmi of Finland and winning a gold medal in the 1930 Empire

Oddie joined the Meteorological Office in 1926 and retired in 1966 as Deputy Director. The Meteorological Office was formed in 1854 so that, according to Hansard, "we might know in this metropolis

the condition of the weather 24 hours beforehand [laughter]".

Its first head was Admiral

Robert FitzRoy, who was captain of the Beagle on the remarkable survey voyage during which Charles Darwin made the observations later used in developing his theories of evolution. FitzRoy set up a system for communicating weather observations by telegraph and the first storm warning for shipping was issued on 6 February 1861.

him in the forefront of meteorological research in connection with the airship development programme. This came to an abrupt end in 1930 with the embodied in papers on low-level wind structure, have had weather forecaster, serving in both war and peacetime in places as different as the northwest frontier in India and the Shetland Islands. In those days

all the charts were plotted by hand with twin black and red pens and there was no assistance in analysis and forecasting from computer models, satellite pic-

In 1955 he returned to research and established himself in atmospheric chemistry,

where his realistic opinions on the subject of rain-making were not always well received. As Deputy Director from 1959

he was much involved with techniques of observing the weather and the planning and installation of the high-speed

High-speed then would mean desk-top now, but developments in numerical models of the atmosphere taken forward formed the science of weather forecasting, which has always been a science, though perhaps in his time more tinged with the computer, Comet.

tures or weather radar.

Brian Oddie's first job placed

Games.

Victor Ambartsumian

Within the Soviet Union Victor Mount Aragats, north of Yere-Ambartsumian pursued twin careers as both a leading astronomer and a powerful politician who rose to represent his native Armenia as a deputy in the Supreme Soviet of the

Born in Thlisi, Georgia in 1908 and educated in Leningrad, his work first came to prominence in physics when in 1929 with Dmitry Ivanenko he published a paper demonstrating that atomic nuclei could not be made from protons and electrons. Three years later this was confirmed when Sir James Chadwick discovered neutrons, which with protons make up atomic nuclei.

Ambartsumian worked for some years at the Pulkovo Observatory, near Leningrad, where he turned his attention to the transfer of radiation through stellar atmospheres in the approximation where the curvature of the stratification is neglected. There he discovered an important new invariance principle later taken up by Subrahmanyan Chandrasekhar, and demonstrated his formidable powers in analytic mathematics.

Thus he was already well known internationally when in 1943 he moved back to his native Armenia to found the world-famous Biurakan Ob-servatory in 1944 (he remained its Director until 1988) on fought for, such well-known

van, the Armenian capital, and to become Professor of Astrophysics at Erevan University in Here he developed the idea that explosions from a very dense state are associated with the formation of stars, star clusters, galaxies and even the universe itself. He showed that most young stars are not gravitationally bound in clusters but are members of expanding associations, and this was soon widely accepted. He regarded this expansion as a relic of the creation process and looked for explosions as a sign of creation in all astronomical objects from flare stars to galaxies and the universe.

Explosions in galactic nuclei and quasars are now widely accepted phenomena and while these were certainly predicted by Ambartsumian's ideas, those ideas themselves are not widely held. Nevertheless it was his relentless quest to get evi-dence to further these ideas concerning astronomical ex-plosions that led him to push for better equipment for the observatory. He directed campaigns of discovery and observation of many of the most interesting objects in the sky including flare stars in clusters and associations, astronomical catalogues of active galaxies as those of Markarian and Arakelian would never have been produced and Gurzadian's studies of flare stars could not have been made.

Duncan Munro Kerr

Ambartsumian put Armenia on the astronomical map. He could never have achieved all this without his skills as a politician. From 1940 he was a member of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, became president of the Armenian Academy of Sciences 1946-93, served as a Deputy to the Supreme Soviet of the USSR from 1950 and was a member of the foreign affairs committee of the Soviet Union as well as holding similar posts in the Armenian Communist Party. In 1989, when aged 80, he went on a three-week hunger strike to attract the Soviet government's attention to the Nagorny Karabakh enclave's drive to secede from Azerbaijan and join

He was twice a Hero of Soviet Labour and held the Hammer and Sickle Gold Medal and five Orders of Lenin among other Communist awards. He was president of the International Astronomical Union 1961-64 and of the International Council of Scientific Unions 1968-72.

Armenia.

His many academic honours include membership of the USSR Academy of Sciences, sport of sailing in the UK, from 1988 to 1991 and from 1992 to 1995. He also served on many member of the Royal Yacht

Squadron, the Bar Yacht Club

and West Mersea Yacht Club.

At an international level

Munro Kerr had been a mem-

Council since 1990, responsible for the United Kingdom, Ireland and Hong Kong, and a member since 1990 of the Constitution Committee of the International Yacht Racing Union

(now the International Sailing Federation), the top administrative authority for sailing worldwide. As Vice-Chairman of the Constitution Committee

since 1994, he had been active in completing the recent re-structuring of the union's con-

Duncan Munro Kerr was a brain and a keen wit. He was always kind, totally honest and utterly loyal to his friends. He owed his considerable success in his legal career, in his riding and sailing and in his work as a yachting administrator to these qualities, together with his physical and moral courage, flinching pursuit of excellence.

Duncan Munro Kerr, barrister

and yachtsman: born Woking,

Surrey 24 January 1953; married

1985 Catherine Greville (three daughters); died 13 August 1996.

ist and microscopist, 1723; Elizabeth high standards and his un-

Colin Campbell

regulations.

of its committees, and was a

and foreign membership of the Royal Society, the US National Academy and the Indian Academy of Sciences. After the collapse of the Soviet Union he was awarded the medal of a National Hero of Armenia.

Victor Ambartsumian was a broad-shouldered thickset man of medium height, quick intellect and strong character. It was best to have him on your side in any argument. His love of poetry and music was shared with his wife Vera.

D. Lynden-Bell

Victor Amazaspovich Ambartsumian, astrophysicist and politi-cian: born Tblisi, Georgia 18 September 1908; lecturer and research worker, Leningrad Uni-versity 1931-43; corresponding member, USSR Academy of Sciences 1939-53, member 1953-96; member, Communist Party of the Soviet Union 1940-96; member, Armenian Academy of Sciences 1943-96, President 1947-93, Honorary President 1993-96; Founder and Director, Biurakan Astrophysics Observatory 1944-88; Professor of Astrophysics, Erevan University 1947-96; Vice-President, International Astronomical Union 1948-55, President 1961-64; Deputy, Supreme Soviet USSR 1950-91: President, International Council of Scientific Unions 1968-72; married 1931 (two sons and two daughters); died Mount Aragats. Armenia 12 August 1996.

E. Digby Baltzell

With the death of Duncan Munro Kerr, the sport of sail-ing has lost one of its ablest administrators and one who had been expected to play an even greater role both nationally and internationally in the years ahead. He was lost at sea in the early hours of 13 August; he had been competing in the yacht Trocar in the Royal Ocean Racing Club's Cowes to Rotterdam race and was 27 miles off Ostend on the final leg of the course to Rotterdam when the accident occurred. During his early years, Munro Kerr had shown little interest in the sailing that was to become the dominant recreational interest of his adult life. Instead, he spent much of his free time during his school years riding. He devoted a gap year after Marlborough College to his showjumping career, which culminated in his participation as a member of the British Showjumping Team in competitions in France. Poland

On graduating in Law from Bristol University, he decided to follow in the footsteps of his late father, Andrew Munro Kerr, and was called to the Bar in 1975. Munro Kerr joined what were then John Edwards's chambers in Queen Elizabeth Building, Temple, as their first pupil, in January 1976. He remained there throughout his career as a barrister.

law, most of his career was devoted to criminal work, specialising more recently in commercial fraud cases. He had been selected earlier this year for appointment as an Assistant Recorder, due to commence sitting in 1997.

Shortly after graduating, Munro Kerr had been introduced to the sport of offshore racing by a flatmate from his Bristol days, Nick Playfair, who was looking for crew for his 37ft 1966 Sparkman & Stephens One Tonner, Clarionet. It was to this sport that he was to devote most of his leisure time for the remainder of his life, through which he met his wife, and which led to what was tuntamount in recent years to a sec- for the English team for the ond, parallel, career as a yachting administrator.

Munro Kerr crewed on Clarionet from 1976 to 1979 and was time for the current year and a co-owner from 1982 to 1984. was widely considered to be a competing in many of the Royal Ocean Racing Club's races in the Channel and on the east coast. During those years, Clariteries won its class in many of the club led to his election as a races and the 1982 Class V Sea-member of the council of the son's Points Championship in Royal Yachting Association,

visions. Munro Kerr first met Catherine Greville in the Island Sailing Club in Cowes during Cowes Week in 1978, when she was already an experienced offshore racer, having competed in her first offshore race at the age of 11 with her father. Nick Greville, in Trocar, a 34ft Holman & Pye sloop.

Munro Kerr became a co-Having started in common owner of Trocar with his future father-in-law in 1985. They won their class in the Royal Ocean Racing Club's Fastnet races of 1985 and 1989 and came second in 1987 and 1991: they also won the 1987 Class V Season's Points Championship in both Division One and the Restricted division, among many other

Munro Kerr served on the main committee of the Royal Ocean Racing Club for the first time from 1982 to 1986 and as a Rear Commodore from 1986 to 1988. He was chairman of the Channel Handiean Committee in 1987, a member of the Admiral's Cup Management Committee from 1988 to 1989 and chairman of the selectors Commodores' Cup in 1994 and 1996. He was elected to the main committee for a second likely future Commodore of

His performance in committee and as a flag officer of the vespula vulgaris, but a White Anglo-Saxon Protestant, has changed perceptions of American society and even American history. The world owes it to an eminent sociologist at the University of Pennsylvania with the magnificently appropriate Wasp name of E. Digby Baltzell. Not all his friends and students knew that the E. stood for This pregnant neologism saw

The serendipitous invention of the word Wasp, denoting not the yellow-and-black striped insect,

the light of day because Baltzell found that while crisper appellations such as "Jews" or even Roman Catholics" fitted into statistical tables, "White Anglo-Saxon Protestants" did so only with difficulty.

Baltzell and his coinage of the word Wasp have helped to draw attention to the dirty little secret that in a society that boasts of being classless, there is and has always been an American aristocracy. Not that there was for Baltzell. He was, and I think he would have been prepared to admit, in a benign sense a suob. He dedicated one of his books to "all my undergraduate friends at the University of Pennsylvania, many of them grandsons of immigrants to the urban frontier, who, in spite of their posty in an open class system. He quoted Karl Marx to the sessing too many Jaguars and mink-coated mothers, have con-

the American Dream of unlimited opportunity". Baltzell was born in Philadelhia and grew up in Chestnut Hill, then the best address in the city. He went to St Paul's, an Episcopalian boarding school in New Hampshire and then to the University of Pennsylvania, not a state institution, but an Ivy stantly been renewed by faith in League school After serving as a pilot in the US Navy, he did his doctorate in Sociology before returning to Pennsylvania, in Philadelphia, to teach, which he continued to do until his retirement in 1986.

I remember him from the 1950s, a dapper figure in tweed jackets and bow ties, popular in a slightly aloof way, but always courteous and accessible. Far more important to him than his personal preference for English clothes and for the ethos and manners of the gentleman was was necessary for the provision of leadership, both nationally and internationally. He began his best-known and most influential book, The Protestant Establishment (1964). by asserting that while socialist faiths might aim for a classless society, the United States stressed equality of opportuni-

effect that "the more a ruling class is able to assimilate the most prominent men of the ated classes, the more stable and dangerous is its rule". He used the Lincoln family as an example. Everyone knew, he pointed out, that Abraham Lin-coln came of humble origins. Not everyone remembered that he sent his son to Phillips Andover, the American Eton, and to Harvard College, and that Robert Todd Lincoln was altogether the epitome of the Victorian aristocrat, clubman and gentleman. In spite of his preference for an aristocratic leadership in society, Baltzell's views were liberal. He believed that the American upper class, the Protestant aristocracy, had made a historic mistake, damaging to the nation, when it failed to assimilate the most successful and talented members of other groups, and especially Much of The Protestant Establishment is devoted to the social exclusion of Jews from

Wasp clubs, which he called "the dishonourable treatment of distinguished Jews by members of the old-stock establishment". But behind this specific and arguably somewhat parochial concern, his abiding interest was the decline of authority in American society. which he attributed in part to the decline of aristocracy.

In another study, Puritar Boston and Quaker Philadelphia (1979), he concluded that the Protestant elite of Boston, for all its spootiness and hardness. had been more effective than Philadelphia's dominant Ouakers, whose traditions of modesty made them less effective.

In a 1958 book, he described the rise of the Philadelphia élite from which he sprang: his father was a successful insurance broker. In the 1960s, he argued strongly that the existing elites must assimilate talented black leaders into a national aristocracy.

In his later years he was much exercised by the way the Wasps were losing influence. He considered, and taught, that they had failed the nation by abandoning their tradition of public service, and that they were just not up to the job in and Asian leaders.

Edward Digby Baltzell, sociolo-gist: born Philadelphia 14 November 1915; married 1943 Jan Piper (deceased; two daughters). 1991 Jocelyn Carlson; died Philadelphia 17 August 1996.

Offence), Car Trouble (1985, starring Julie Walters and Ian

Charleson) and A Fish Called

Archers since 1988 that he was best known. He had previously played two other roles in the serial - joining it in 1979 as John

Tregorran, then taking the part of Sir Sidney Goodman, who was at one of Jack Woolley's shooting parties. He was last heard as Bert Fry on 14 August, when he and arch-rival Tom

Forrest were locked in battle

But it was as Bert Fry in The Wanda (1988).

R101 disaster but the results, a long-lasting value.
Oddie became a practising

Godfrey Hodgson

art of experience. Brian Oddie was gentle, compassionate and intelligent. He was a man with a child-like passion in whatever took his interest. This varied enormously and included games-playing, music, history, astronomy, carpentry and, most importantly, his grandchildren. At bridge, he founded the local league in Bracknell, still flourishing over 30 years later. With his wife Phyl. he played a mean game; they took up the Precision Club system in their eighties and were still winning events at a combined age of over He became the president of the local history society and had a particular interest in local church history and the history of pub signs. Brian Oddie lived his 91 years to the full. He was a broad and cultured man with a twinkle of good-humour. I imagine he is the only person to have quoted Gertrude Stein at a postings board meeting of the Meteorological Office.

Colin Flood

Brian Cecil Vernon Oddie. meteorologist: born Luton 15 May 1905; staff, Meteorological Office 1926-66, Deputy Director 1959-66; CBE 1965; married 1933 Phyllis Bate (one son, one daughter); died Bracknell, Berkshire 7 August 1996.

MARRIAGES & DEATHS (Births, Adoptions, Marriages, Deaths, Memorial services, Wedding anniversaries, in Memorism) should be sent in writing to the Ganetic Editor, The Independent, I Canada Square, Canary Wharf, London E14 5DL, telephoned to 0171-293 2011 (24-bour answering machine 0171-293 2012) or faxed to 0171-293 2018, and are charged at £6.50 a line (VAT extra). OTHER Gazette annouscements (notices, functions, Forthmouscements (notices, functions, Forthmouscements (notices, functions, Forthmouscements (notices, functions, Forthmouscements (notices, functions, Forthmouscements) rousements (notices, functions, Forth-coming marriages, Marriages) must be submitted in writing (or burd) and are charged at £10 a line, VAT extra. They should be accompanied by a daytime telephone number.

Roger Hume

The Archers, radio's longestrunning serial, Roger Hume was known to millions as Phil and Jill Archer's farmhand, often finding himself in conflict with other residents of Ambridge. Born in London in 1940, the son of George Hume, a general manager of the Shakespeare stitution and in updating its Memorial Theatre in Stratfordupon-Avon, the actor began his career as an assistant stage handsome man with a first class manager at Wimbledon Theatre, and had the same role in the original West End production of the hit musical Oliver! (1960), starring Ron Moody, at the

New Theatre. He also worked behind the scenes on the films Carry On Regardless (1961) and The Road to Hong Kong (1961, starring Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Dean Martin and Frank Sinatra), as well as being a flyingwire operator with the legendary Crazy Gang comedy team.

After three years in a teacher training college, Hume returned to the stage as an actor.

defeated the French at the Battle of

As man-of-the-earth Bert Fry in He played leading roles with repertory companies across the country, small parts with the Royal Shakespeare Company in Stratford, and acted in the orig-inal London production of Teeth 'n' Smiles, and Edward Bond's The Fool, both at the Royal Court Theatre. He also appeared in a revival of Blithe Spirit, at the Vaudeville Theatre, and The Resistible Rise of Arturo Ui. at the Queen's Theatre.
In 1979, Hume created the role of Herbert Pinnegar in his one-man play of Alfred Shaughnessy's Old Herbaccous, at Salisbury Playhouse, before repeating it at the Mayfair Theatre, in the West End. Such was the play's success that he later recorded it for television and radio, toured it in Britain, Australia, Zimbahwe and at the Charleston Festival in South Carolina, and performed it in front of the Queen at Windsor Castle. He also wrote and started in the one-man shows Winston, a portrait of Sir Win-

Hume: battle over bats in The Archers Photograph: Newsteam

Please Sir. a teacher's humorous viewpoint of school life. On television, Hume acted in programmes such as Special Branch, Play for Today, Coronation Street, Edward and Mrs Simpson (as Humphrey Butler), Rumpole of the Bailey, Agatha Christie's Poirot, Fawlty Towers, the Truth (1972, later retitled The over the removal of bats from Ambridge's church. Roger Hume, himself a Church of England lay preacher, acted in more than 200 other radio productions, including many plays, as well as providing voice-overs for documentaries and reading stories. The Bill and EastEnders. He was also in the films Something Like

Authomy Hayward

Roger Hume, actor: born London 19 November 1941; married (two sons); died Banbury, Oxford-shire 24. August 1996.

Birthdays

The Duke of Gloucester, 52; Mr H.W. "Bunny" Austin, former tennis play-er, 90; Sir Kenneth Barnes, former senior civil servant, 74: The Right Rev Alan Chesters, Bishop of Black-burn, 59: Mrs Joan Clanchy, Headmistress. North London Collegiate School 57; Mr Howard Clark, goller. 42: Mr Michael Cockerell, television reporter, 56; Mr Richard Dales, former High Commissioner to Zim-babwe, 54; Mr Peter Fowler, former High Commissioner to Bangladesh. olt, Mr Stuart Graham, former chairman, International Commodities Clearing House, 75: Mr Tim Mahy. radio news reporter and presenter. 49: Sir Ian McGregor, tropical medicine authority, 74; Mr David Martin, MEP, 42; Mr Malcolm Pyrah, show jumper, 55; Mr Graham Riddick MP, 41; Miss Alison Steadman, actress, 50; Mr Dennis Turner MP, 54; General Sir Harry Tuzo, former deputy Supreme Allied Commander. Europe, 79; Professor John Varey. former Principal, Westfield College, former Bishop of Norwich, 80; Mr Steve Wright, disc jockey, 42

Anniversaries

Births: Sir Robert Walpole, Earl of Orford, statesman, 1676; Joseph-Michel Montgolfier, balloonist, 1740; Antoine-Laurent Lavoisier, chemist. 1743; Joseph Christoph Kessler (Kotzler), pionist and composer, 1800; Prince Albert, Consort to Oneen Victoria, 1819: Stephen Joseph Perry. astronomer and Jesuit, 1833; John William Mackail, scholar, 1859; Lee De Forest, radio and television inventor, 1873; Sir John Buchan, first Baron Tweedsmair, Governor-General of Canada and novelist. 1875: Guillaume Apollinaire (Wilhelm Apollinaris de Kostrowitsky). poet. 1880: Jules Romains (Louis-Henri Jean Farigoule), novelist, playwright and poet, 1885; Christopher William Bradshaw Isherwood. novelist, 1984. Deaths: Ouakar II. King of Bohemia, killed in battle 1278: Frans Hals, painter, 1666; 74; The Right Rev Maurice Wood, Antoni van Leeuwenhock, natural-

Chudleigh, Countess of Bristol and Duchess of Kingston, concubine and alleged bigamist, 1788; Count Alessandro de Cagliostro (Giuseppe Balsamo), impostor, 1795; Thomas Cooke, miser, 1811; Louis-Philippe, "Citizen King" of France, 1850; Her-mann Goldschmidt, painter and astronomer, 1866; Baron Hendrik Leys, painter, 1869; Karl Wilhelm, choral director and composer of Die Wacht am Rhein, 1873; George Munville Fenn. novelist, 1909; William James, psychologist and philosopher, 1910; Manhias Erzberger. German linance minister, assassinated, 1921; Lon (Alonso) Chancy, actor, 1930; Frank (James Thomas) Harris, editor and author, 1931: Ralph Vaughan Williams, composer, 1958; Naomi Ellington Jacob, novclist, 1964; Sir Francis Charles Chichester, aviator and yachtsman, 1972; Charles Augustus Lindbergh, pioneer aviator, 1974: Charles Boyer, actor, 1978. On this day: Julius Caesar landed in Britain, 55 BC; King Edward III, aided by the Black Prince, his son, Crécy, 1346; Frederick the Great repelled the Russian invading army at the indecisive Battle of Zorndorf. 1758; Mendelssohn's oratorio Elijah was first performed, Birmingham Festival, 1846; Krakatoa, the island olcano, began erupting, killing over 36,000 people, 1883; under the 19th Amendment, women in the United States were granted the right to vote. 1920; the Anglo-Egyptian alliance was signed, 1936; the XXth Olympic Games opened in Munich, 1972; Cardinal Albino Luciani was elected Pope John Paul I, 1978. Today is the Feast Day of St Bregwine. archbishop of Canterbury, St Elizabeth Bichier des Ages, St Herluin, St John Wall, St Mary Desmaisieres, St Pandonia and St Teresa Jornet Ihars.

Arthur Leslie Noel Douglas Houghton, Lord Houghton of Sower-by, of Bletchingley, Surrey, the politi-cian, left estate valued at £247,226

Sir William Henry Naim Wilkinson. of London W11, Chairman, Nature Conservancy Council 1983-91, left estate valued at £712,254 net.

ston Churchill in old age, and

Sir Stephen James Hamilton Miller of Woking, Surrey, the ophthalmologist, Surgeon-Oculist to the Queen 1974-80, left estate valued at £681,979 pet. Sir Harry Campion, of Stammore,

Middlesex, Director of the Central

Statistical Office, Cabinet Office 1941-67, and Director, UN Statistical Office 1946-47, left estate valued at £410,934 net. He left £1,000 to the Parochial Church Council of St John Evangelist Farnworth, Lancashire: the Royal Statistical Society and the Manchester Statistical Society. Norman Frank Thacker, of Brailsford, Derbyshire, left estate valued at £5 706,479 pct.

Charles Barnet Casseron Harvey, of Moreton-in-Marsh, Gloucestershire, left estate valued at £3,328,307 net. Helen Christina Dykes, of Torquay. Devon, left estate valued at

appointments

The following appointments have been announced by the Church of England:

England:
The Rev Kathleen Batte, Assistant Curate (NSM), Newcastle St Gabriel (Newcastle): to be Assistant Curate (NSM), Wilford Hill St Paul (Southwell).
The Rev Helen Begley, Assistant Curate, Leeds City, and Chaplain. Leeds Centre for Deaf People (Raipain. Leeds Centre for Deaf People (Raipain): to be Chaplain to the Deaf and Hard of Hearing People (Salisbury). The Rev David Hazdewood, Rector, Ipswich St Helen (St Edmandshuy and Ipswich): to be Vicar, Shirley (Wancherser).
The Rev Christopher Houghton, Arastant Curate, Southport St Palin and St Paul and Chaplain to Formby NHS Trust: to be Chaplain, Charley and South Ribble NHS Trust (Blackburn).
The Rev Robin Morrison, Principal Social Responsibility Officer (Derby): to be Team Vic-

The Rev Robin Morrison. Principal Social Responsibility Offices (Derby): to be liam Vicar. Southampton Team Ministry, with responsibility for Consucrete and Economic Development (Winchester).

The Rev Brian Nicholson, Vicar, Colchoster St John (Cheimsdord): to be Rector, Church Cakley and Wootton (Winchester).

The Rev Paul Oliver, Vicar, Eartham St Ante, and Rural Dean of Norwich South: to be also an Honorary Canon of Norwich Cathedral (Norwich).

The Rev Richard Ordanon, Rector, Collinstree with Courseenhall and Militon Maj-Collingues with Coursecrated and Militon Mai-sor, to be also Rural Dean of Wootton (Peterborough). Tire Rev Sarah Sewell, Assistant Chaplain.

The Rev Peter Thomson, Peterson (Capitain, Derrifted Hospital, Pymouth (Except); to be Capitain, Stoke Mandeville Hospital (Oxford). The Rev Peter Thomson, permission to official, Wangararia Dicesse, Australia: to be Assistant Curate. West Holloway St Luke (Control).

The Rev Deny Roomey, Assistant Curate, Bev-erley St Nicholass to be Vicar, Anlaby Com-mon St Mark, Hull (York), The Rev Geoffrey van der Wergen, Rector, Sumestield with Combet to be also Rural Dean

RESIGNATIONS and RETIREMENTS

The Rev Dr Murray Dell, Vieur, Lyme Reg-is (Salubury); to retire 31 October. The Rev John Godfrey, Assistant Curate (NSM), West Woodbay with Emborne, Hamp-uead Marshall, Indyen and Combe (Ox-ford); to retire 16 November. The Rev Peter Remon, Vient, Beedon and Peasemore with West Beley and Farnborough Childrel; to reite 31 August.

The Rev Verson Scott, Rector, East and West Rusham, Houghton-neu-Harpley, Tatterest and Tatterford, and Fries-to-charge, South Raynham, East with West Raynham, Helboughton, Wessenham and Wellingtom (Normich); to clim 20 Seathers and Control of the Control of t

The Independent's main switchboard number is 8171-293 2980.

Changing of the Guard The Household Cavalry Mounted Regiment mounts the Queen's Life Guard at Horse Guards, 11am; 1st Battalion Irish Guards mounts the Queen's Guard at Backingham Palace, 11.30cm, band provided by the Coldstream Guards.

Principal to other states of the states of t

Maria de la compania del compania del la compania del compania de la compania de la compania de la compania del compania

PART OF FRANCE OF STATE

Franch Commence of the Commenc

Mile the second of the least of other than the state of the sta milit or any

by to all the blood.

State of the state of the attaska wa 📆

of the to a second althorate a secondary

Character and Silver integration

ing he trace a gar-

intile of passent

State of the State

क्षांच्याका अध्यक्षित

Sakar datte bet plante

action and

am CM restariants

getter body of the

But the Same

The Street

ingerier in the company

Service of the Res

the state of the state of Belled that green

with the decision

Burn & Buch

(Lap. 1) is a second

Burner Commence

action of the same

المجارية والمراجع

SECTION OF

.....

----

16

;-- : · · ·

n C

M 11 1 1

ية وجو

χ, μ¹⁴ −1 -1.

indian in

carn in

SUPER TO

. . . !

∌.a* general C

ges i

ÇÎ, li

 y_{i+1}

7,7

g graden

(14-, 17)

1.00

·

ine the second

Mary and a second secon

કાર્યો ^{હતે}

Party:

Mar Pargette

Carles

S Hamilton

30 Mar 4 in 2 ben?" garan da

100 Bloom

,.} ι' ⋅

O can same a la se de la seconda de la secon

HAY BUTTON

Attention turns to OFT approval as Bass finally announces deal that will make it Britain's largest brewer with one-third of the market

Bass buys Carlsberg-Tetley for £200m

TOM STEVENSON City Editor

Months of increasingly well-informed speculation finally ended yesterday as Bass announced a £200m deal to acquire Carlsberg-Tetley, the struggling brewing joint venture between Allied Domecq and Carlsberg.
If it gains regulatory approval, the deal will see Bass regain its title as Britain's biggest brewer and mark the final exit of Allied from the industry. from the industry.

The unconditional deal must now wait for the green light from the Office of Fair Trading, which has to decide whether to refer the acquisition to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in light of the 35 per cent share of the UK brewing market it will secure for Bass. Last year, Scottish & Newcastle was given the nod, in exchange for a handful of minor concessions, for its takeover of Courage, which gave it a 31 comment policy throughout the 15-month-long negotiations with Allied and Carlsberg, said yesterday: "I am delighted we have been able to agree this merger. Brewers continue to face a whole range of competitive pressures on wholesale volumes, prices and margins, and it is these pressures that are forcing consolidation."

He said Bass had already had discussions with the OFT on the proposed transaction. "Now it is in the public domain, we will address any specific concerns the regulatory authorities may have surrounding the transaction."

Tony Hales, chief executive of Allied Domecq, described the deal as "the culmination of a two-year disposal programme of non-core businesses which will enable us to concentrate fully on the development of our spirits and retailing businesses".

Allied will take a £320m

charge against profits to cover

Carrying off Carlsberg-Tetley: Bass chairman Sir Ian Prosser (right) and Richard North, finance director

Tetley at well above the current market price. As a result of taking upfront the cost of that contract, which expires at the end of 1997, the deal is expected to be earnings enhancing for Al-lied from the 1996/97 financial year, which begins next week.

As expected, the deal sees Bass acquiring Allied's share in Carlsberg-Tetley for £200m in cash. In addition, Carlsberg will inject its half of the venture into Bass's brewing arm, Bass Brewers, and pay a further £20m in exchange for a 20 per cent stake in all of the combined operations except Bass's Irish and export

Together with Whitbread, which has 14 per cent of the market, Britain's three biggest brewers will now account for four out of every five pints brewed in Britain. The latest move in the consolidation of British brewing was criticised by Camra, the organisation that champions real, ago, the industry referred to its cask-conditioned ales: "The proposed Bass-Tetley merger marks the beginning of the end for 'choice and diversity for 'choice and 'choice and diversity for 'choice and diversity for 'choice and 'choice a British beer drinkers. We face the Americanisation of beer with a handful of brands dominating the pub trade."

A hundred years ago there were 1,500 brewery companies in Britain but that number has fallen to only a few dozen, including regional players who are increasingly being squeezed by the nationals. Only seven years berg-Tetley operation £52m profit last year.

Bass Carling Black Label Tennent's Lager Caffrey's Insh Ale Grolsch Worthington's Carling Premier Hopper's Hooch Stone's Bitter Tennent's Super

many control the industry. Bass said yesterday it would continue supplying Allied Domecq's retail pub estate with beer until the current contract expires in December 1997. The advantageous terms of the contract are understood to be the only reason the struggling Carlsberg-Tetley operation made a two-way split Now that Allied Domecq has completed its withdrawal from dismal five years in which the brewing, attention will shift to the future of a group which has created a focus for its once sprawling empire, but which failed to transform it into the shareholder value being demanded by increasingly restive Domecq, the Spanish-Mexican institutional investors.

Carlsberg-Tetley Tetley Bitter Carisberg Lager Carlsberg Special Brew Castlemaine XXXX Carisberg ice Carlsberg Export Lemonhead Burton Ale ∀ault :::-'

Allied mulls

The sale of Allied's stake in Carlsberg-Tetley is the latest of the peso which massacred the move in a radical reconstruction business's profits. of the group whose interests once spanned cup cakes to car hit by stagnation in the global sales and beer but which has reverted to two main opera-tions, retailing and spirits. From Dunkin Donuts and Baskin Robbins on the retail side to Beefeater, Kahlua, Teachers and Sauza in spirits. Allied is a world away from the J Lyons teashop chain that flourished at the turn of the century.

The recent appointment of Sir Christopher Hogg as chairman has been seen as the prelude to a break-up of the group into its core retailing and spirits operations - a move which some analysts believe might attract higher ratings, if only because the constituent parts could attract a bid approach. The market's scepticism about the group, whose ex-pected profits for the year to the end of this month will be more than halved by the £320m writeoff accompanying the Carlsberg sale, is reflected in a dividend yield of almost 7 per cent and a sharp discount to the market average price-earnings ratio. Chief executive Tony Hales is under pressure to reverse a company has seemed to stagger from one disaster to another. In 1991, the group lost heavily on the foreign exchange markets in a misjudged hedging operation and, in 1994, the acquisition of spirits business, preceded by only a few hours a devaluation business's profits.

The company has also been spirits market, which has suffered a hangover after the party of the 1980s.

As the boom collapsed, consumers refused to accept price rises of between 5 and 10 per cent a year, and rises of only one or two per cent are now normal. Own-label drinks are becoming a threat, and all the big spirits groups are paying the price for a lack of marketing spend.

As a result, Allied has seen its shares massively underperform the rest of the stock market. Since 1992, they have lost half their value relative to other stocks, and there has been increasing pressure from institutional investors for changes in management and strategy.

Sir Christopher, who pulled off a highly successful demorger at Courtaulds in the early 1990s, is expected to attempt something similar at Allied, although to date he has only said that all options for the group are under review.

Lloyd's plan wins majority

tom Stevenson City Editor

David Rowland, chairman of Lloyd's, said yesterday that 75 per cent of the insurance mar-ket's 34,000 members had voted in favour of a planned restructuring that would allow them to draw a line under massive losses incurred in the late 1980s and early 1990s.

The level of acceptances was revealed as Lloyd's prepared to appeal tomorrow against an injunction granted in a state of Virginia court last Friday that had threatened to derail the £3.2bn rescue package.

The injunction, which demanded that Lloyd's produce

American names, effectively ruled out the possibility of securing the agreement of all American members by the deadline for acceptances, set for noon on Wednesday. Mr Rowland said yesterday:

"I am confident that by the deadline the offer will have been accepted by the overwhelming majority of our mem-bers. The position we are in at the moment is that we already have, from the votes that have been cast, the knowledge that the majority of the members wish to go ahead."

Lloyd's members who have not yet accepted the deal have been warned that failing to do more information for 93 of its so will leave them outside any settlement. The deal offers Lloyd's members debt write-offs of £2.1bn and a litigation settlement fund of a further £1.1bn. Many US members have already accepted the offer. An appeal against the Virginia injunction is due to be heard in the Federal Appeals Court in Baltimore, Maryland tomorrow. Failure to overturn the decision could leave Lloyd's with a funding deficit of up to £200m. If that were the case it would risk failing a solvency test set by the Department of Trade and Industry and due to take place at the end of this week. Mr Rowland remained confident of victory on appeal:

"We have to remember that we've had countless actions in the United States. We won all the key ones to do with Lloyd's and I'm absolutely certain that the Court of Appeal will actu-ally see the good sense of what we're doing and support us."

Lloyd's is understood to have several contingency plans in place to ensure the rescue package goes through. One option is to exclude the American names and replace their funding with bank borrowings.
At the heart of the Virginia ruling was a claim that American names needed more information before they could decide whether to approve the restructuring package.

BUSINESS TO BUSINESS

thrown into the merger pot in the year to September 1995

from net assets of £890m. Bass said yesterday that the deal

would be earnings enhancing,

before exceptional charges, in the year to September 1997.

Bass added that it expects to secure annual cost savings of £90m, including savings already announced by Carlsberg-Tetley, with a one-off cost, to be tak-

Bass confirmed that, subject to there being no regulatory re-en against profits, of £75m.

cated it planned to close.

a dealership is the answer new numbers 4 earn cash! call for FREE pack now

■ We allocate 07000 numbers and orgently need more dealers to sell

Numbers are selling fast as memorable ● Sell to ALL your existing contacts

- they are quickly and easily directed to trigently need more dealers to sell them. Be successful – sell 07000 mmbers

Immediate generous commission paid in direct association with us.

Company Numbers or Personal Numbers
Full training and back-up provided for your FREE dealer pack call

CASH FLOW OPPORTUNITY

Highly Profluible One Person Operation
 No Salling
 45 Hours Per Wesl.
 Cno Operato from House or Office.

or Office

Training Green

Exercises After-Sales

Service

Trail Figures Available

NTERDATA

2nd Floor, Windows House 55 St. James's Street, SWI

For Free Information

Pack FREECALL 0500 827 853

TELECOMMUNICATIONS

BELIEFT ACCESS TO THE TELEPHONE NETWORK

Services

TRADE DIRECTORIES ORIENT TRADE DIRECTORY, TAIWAN TRADE DIRECTORY, HONG KONG TRADE DIRECTORY, PHILIPPINE TRADE DIRECTORY.

JAPAN TRADE DIRECTORIES AND USA
TRADE DIRECTORIES If you are in Import and Export, you need these directories to make big profit. Buy for as little as

These comprehensive directories are loaded with products, photos, addresses, phone/fax numbers of factories that are just minutes away from your fax machine! Discover new hot sellers before your competitors do. Beat the competition this coming Christmas. Some offer up to 90 days credit.

All 6 will normally cost you over £720.00 to huy. All 6 are yours for £140.00 or £25.00 each. Get your free copy of The USA Drop Shippers List. Don't let others make your profit, to order your copies now, contact The Merit Concept, 20c Tower Workshop, Riley Road, London SEI 3DG, England TEL: 0171 394 3350 FAX: 0171 394 3323

Dove

TRAVEL Start your own Trevel brokerag Sell a wide range of trevel services scholing lights host your own tesseroth F/T or FrT. As your excellent closing lagrided by our long scattlished broads centre. Excelors profit potential ALL.
PLALLY BONDED. Liberce the C340 × W.

Black Listed? Use Black Pages

All companies where you will NOT be credit checked and refused i.e., Credit Cards, Cars, mortgages etc. 0181-230 5171 24hrs

NOTICE TO READERS Whilst we take reasonable precautions with all advertisements, readers are strongly advised to take professional advice before paying a deposit or entering into any financial commitmen

ORANGE £99.99_{mrp} RECEIVE A DISCOUNT for a limited period ☐ LEATHER CASE ☐ IN-CAR CHARGER □ SPARE BATTERY ☐ INSURANCE TIEMISED BILLING □ ANSWER SERVICE* , DELIVERY □ ÇAR KIT 🖺 🗅 3 YEAR WARRANTY 🗣 14 DAY TRIAL PHONE FREEPHONE 0500 f 626500 f c

MOBILEXOFOS COMMUNICATION CO 157 September and Gray, Same MILT SEP, bit 81 275 292131 - Fac. 81 375 2928-7

Corporate Training

ATTENTION ALL COMPANY DIRECTORS

Do you really understand computers? YOU'RE NEVER TO OLD TO LEARN. Why not let us train you with your own personal futor in the comfort of your own home or at your office. We offer short one to one sessions which are tailormade to sult your dary. Learn at your own speed and, if not satisfied, we refund your fees.

We guarantee to make you computer literate in all basic business functions. We also supply the latest P.C. free of charge from Lesson One, which is yours to keep. Naturally our fees are fully tax-deductible.

Moreover, we show you how to link your P.C. from home to your office, giving you more quality time with your family, while keeping you up to date with your business.

Why hesitate? Call us today: MILLENNIUM TECHNOLOGY UK Ltd Tel: 01689 816738/877696 (24HRS)

To advertise in this section please call David Owen on 0171 293 2338.

Obsolete offices find a saviour

TOM STEVENSON

A new lease of life for obsolete 1960s office blocks could be provided by cordless information technology, according to a leading design consultancy.

Morgan Lovell, which calls itself a "workplace specialist", believes a new generation of wireless computer and telephone networks could transform working environments and save many buildings written off as unusable thanks to today's computing demands.

According to the company, one of the ironies of computers is that, despite being sold as a great liberating force, they have tended to have the reverse effect within the physical office environment. Desks and other office furniture are literally bound in place by a rats nest of underfloor cables. Changing the layout of an open plan office floor has become expensive and time-consuming.

A London-based accountancy firm with 900 staff in its ful overhead for most compahead office says it moves a third of its workers every year at a cost of about £1,000 a head. Far from allowing greater efficiently, IT has strapped businesses into an expensive straitjacket, Morgan claims. The demand for underfloor wiring and overhead air conditioning has rendered vast swathes of office space obsolete. Many 1960s blocks are unusable in today's working environment because the gap between their floors and ceilings is too small.

The solution, according to Morgan, lies in equipment that already exists but whose potential has only just started to be tapped; cordless office telephones and cordless local area computer networks.

Products currently in pro-duction by companies such as Philips and Ericsson allow 1,000 people to have cordless phone extensions in one building. IBM, Motorola, Olivetti and AT&T, among others, now offer cordless computer networks. The two working together mean the average white collar worker can operate anywhere within an office building, abandoning their desk forever.

Morgan estimates the average office is not occupied for 30 per cent of the working day, making it an extremely wastenies. Many workers spend little of their time at a desk, but most expect they will have somewhere to call their own.

The company believes the biggest challenge lies not in changing technology but in changing workers' expectations of their working environment.

IN BRIEF

• Gehe and Unichem could rebid for Lloyds Chemists after the pharmacy chain said yesterday it had received numerous expressions of interest in buying its wholesaling businesses supplying external customers in a number of UK markets. The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry said on 19 July that bids from ei-ther Unichem or Gehe could only proceed if those operations were sold. The offers made so far have been on the understanding that the sales would only proceed if either Unichem or Gehe were successful in acquiring Lloyds.

 A gold credit card aimed at high earners who want to support birds such as the Golden Eagle was launched yesterday by the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds (RSPB) and the Cooperative Bank. The Co-op will pay the charity £5 for each card taken out as well as 25p for every £100 spent. The two said the existing RSPB/Co-op affinity credit card is already the most successful single issue charity card in the UK with over 90,000 card holders. The card will be available to people earning over £20,000.

 Ladbroke is expected to announce a marketing agreement with the American Hilton Hotels Corporation when it reports interim figures on Thursday. A marketing alliance between Ladbroke. which owns the Hilton brand outside the US, and Hilton could generate savings of up to £5m a year, it has been estimated. Lad-broke became owner of the non-US Hilton hotels in 1987. More or less ever since, speculation has focused on a potential deal to reunite the brands. Pre-tax profits for the year at the betting to hotels group are expected to rise from £56.5m to about £62m.

 German economics minister Guenter Rexrodt has suggested temporarily freezing controversial east German subsidies to car giant Volkswagen to help settle a row with the European Commission. The Commission is disputing the legality of DM91m (£40m) of a DM142m subsidy package paid to Volkswagen to support its investment in two plants in the east German state of Saxony. In an interview for this week's Der Spiegel magazine, Rezrodt said he supported Volkswagen's case but a temporary freeze of the disputed funds pending a European court ruling could form the basis for a Transrapid, Germany's futuristic, high-speed magnetic rail-way project, should generate annual income of DM1bn (£434m), chief executive Dieter Baum said on Sunday. He said contracts to build and service the project were almost complete. The magnetic levitation trains will cover the 290km (180 mile) Hamburg-Berlin route in about an hour when they start running in 2005.

White coats don't lie.

... do they? A new play about the market pressures on scentists may touch a raw nerve. By Hugh Aldersley-Williams

I, the mediocre researcher suddenly promoted to head discussing the amazing work of his colleague Chris with his non-scientist girl-friend, Joanna. He should be elated for his colleague. She

But you've seen it work, the demonstration; you've seen it," she says encouragingly.

"It's only - I can't see how he's done it," he answers. Realisation of the possibility of a far more interesting event - to a non-scientist - dawns. "If it was a fake - Jesus! A fraud ..." And it is. In Stephen Poliakoff's new play, Blinded by the Sun, which opens at the National Theatre next Tuesday, the perpetration of a fraud is used to explore the pressures on scientists. For whereas financial fraudsters are lured by money and greed, fraudulent scientists cheat themselves above all. What makes them do it?

anti-science. It's anti what surrounds science It's about the long-distance creator being in danger, which I think is true in most fields, but particularly in science, where it really matters."

Chris (played by Duncan Bell) is a young researcher who claims to have invented a device that uses sunlight to liberate hydrogen from water as a limitless source of energy shades of "cold fusion". He cheats partly to achieve fame. but also because he feels overwhelming pressure to achieve

The career of Al (Douglas Hodge) prospers from his ma-nipulation of the ensuing fiasco. He is an opportunist but also a good administrator and judge of merit - not least of Chris's results, which he wants confirmed.

Elinor (Frances de la Tour) is the senior member of the laboratory. Highly respected and liberally funded for great work done many years before, she is What makes them do it?

allowed to pursue her own proPoliakoff says, "The play isn't ject and resents being asked increase the temptation to popped up and said they could stand having a history of achievement and expecting because of that to have bought time to go on, even if you are not delivering 'box office'," says Poliakoff. "That attitude is fascinating because it has a lot of right on its side, but it also makes people jolly cross." In the play, Elinor cannot countenance the idea that Chris may have cheated; she advises Al to do nothing.

Poliakoff is well placed to understand these dilemmas. One of his distant cousins was Rosalind Franklin, the crystallographer who played a vital part in discovering the structure of DNA, but was robbed of her share of glory. His brother Martin is Professor of Chemistry at the University of Nottingham. His sister is a doctor.

He believes that today's research environment, where work must increasingly demonstrate "relevance" and be de-

whose new play explores kind of research which leads to eve-catching outcomes such as ear implanted in a mouse's back fraud. He cites the case of biologists who used felt-tipped pens to exaggerate tumours grown on mice as an example of the opportunism that begins to eat away at scientific truth. There is an impatience for things to show a return," he says.

Photographs: Alan Titmuss/

Some work seems more relevant than it is - for instance. the tissue in the shape of a human ear that was grafted on to the back of a mouse, with its false implication that such tissue could be grafted onto a human. Other work hops aboard spurious bandwagons. "When Jurassic Park came out, scien-tal coincidence that this Mars discovery has come out when Independence Day is [a] box-of-

In the play, Al realises that most work should be geared to the marketplace" - but that not all work can be expected to deliver predicted commercial benefits within known time-

This is already understood by many of those who direct science funding. "Most of all, we still need idiosyncratic, pioneering research with no commercial importance," says Philip Harrison of Parexel International, who undertakes fundamental research for pharmaceutical firms. "But that research must be dovetailed into the world of commerce."

Scientists themselves hold differing views of how to do this dovetailing. Professor Fraser Stoddart of Birmingham University believes scientists should be held more accountable, assessed by criteria such as papers published and their "impact factors". "It can be compared to the kind of training needed to get a gold at the Olympics," he says. It is not enough just to turn up, and run the 100m. It needs long preparation.

But science is not so pre-

University of Sussex was the only British scientist involved in the 1985 discovery of buckminsterfullerene, the molecule that constitutes the third form of the element carbon, after diamond and graphite. The discovery was serendipitous and unfunded - rather like training for the 100m, but winning the weightlifting. Fortune, they say, prepared for what? Once a discovery is made, many feel that the scientists who did the basic research should help realise its potential, although they are seldom the best people to lead the applied research. "Sci-favours the prepared mind. But says Professor Kroto. "They have a duty to be involved at the interface of science and society and commerce

Gerard Fairtlough, founder of the biotechnology company is made in the course of curiosity-driven research which has applications, then it is the duty of the scientist concerned that it gets applied. It is entirely reasonable that the taxpayer should insist on the proper exploitation of a scientific discovery. I'm not asking that they should exploit it themselves, just

A chilly outpost of the Solar System that mimics Earth

Saturn is centre stage in the sky this month, but for scientists the beautiful ringed world is increasingly being eclipsed in importance by its biggest moon, Titan.

When the Voyager I flew past Saturn in 1980, it found Titan is unique among all the moons of all the planets in the Solar System. It is the only moon with more than a trace of atmosphere. In fact, Titan's "air" is twice as dense as the Earth's, and - like our planet - the atmosphere is made up mainly of nitrogen. (Hydrogen, methane or carbon dioxide predominate in other planetary atmospheres.) l'oyuger was programmed to photograph Titan's surface in intimate detail, but all the images showed was unrelieved orange cloud. These clouds held their own fascination, because they are made of organic "gunge". Ultraviolet radiation from the Sun has broken up molecules of methane and ethane in the atmosphere and welded them together as complex molecules. Drops of sticky rain may fall from the clouds to mingle with pools of liquid ethane on Titan's hidden, chilly surface. At one time, astronomers even thought Titan might be covered entirely by a deep ocean of liquid ethane.

But now Athena Coustenis, an astronomer at the Meudon Observatory in Paris, has disproved this theory by taking pictures of the surface of Titan with a telescope on the Earth. She had to employ two new tricks.

analogue for our own planet, new pictures suggest.

By Heather Couper and Nigel Henbest

light but infra-red radiation. which can penetrate the organic drops in the clouds. Second, she used a giant European telescope at La Silla in Chile that is fitted with "adaptive optics" - a small flexible mirror that continually bends to compensate for blurring caused by the Earth's atmosphere, and so keeps the tiny features on Titan in crisp focus. Coustenis found several bright regions, indicating that the surface of Titan is mainly solid, though there may be some seas of liquid ethane. There is a polar cap at the north pole. which may consist of frozen ethane or methane "snow". Most exciting is a very bright spot near Titan's equator. It is probably a huge mountain, perhaps three times the height of Mount Everest, and capped with ethane or methane snow. What has raised such a giant mountain on a world much smaller than the Earth? One strong contender is a vast volcano. A highly volcanic surface would also account for Titan's dense atmosphere, with its rich cocktail of gases. We'll know better when the international First, Coustenis observed not Cassini-Huygens spacecraft arrives in 2004. While Cassini orbits Saturn, Huygens will descend through Titan's clouds and land on the frozen surface.

Many scientists see in Titan an analogue for the early Earth, where organic compounds forged by ultraviolet radiation dissolved in the oceans and gave rise to life. Until now, Titan has been regarded as "an early Earth in deep freeze", where the primitive molecules just accumulate on the chilly surface. But if Titan has active volcanoes, which warm their surroundings enough to melt ice into water, then maybe the reactions that formed the first cells on Earth occurred on this chilly outpost of Saturn this year. of the Solar System as well.

What's Up?
At its closest to Earth this month, Saturn is visible all night in the south. Although not as brilliant as the brightest stars, it is the most prominent object in a barren region of sky. Another giveaway is its yellow glow: unlike stars, planets don't twinkle. A small telescope will reveal its famous rings and its biggest moon, cloud-covered Titan.

The full moon lies near Saturn on 26-27 September. Watch through the early hours of the morning and you'll see a stun-ning sight. The moon gradually enters the Earth's shadow, and by 3.19am is in total eclipse. As the moon fades, Saturn will appear increasingly brilliant. It's the second total lunar eclipse this year. In April, the eclipsed moon appeared a reddish colour, because sunlight was bent around into the Earth's shadow by our planet's atmosphere. No one can predict how bright this month's eclipse will be: check it out for yourself. Other sights include Jupiter, still shining brightly in the southwest after sunset, and Venus and Mars in the early morning.

National Astronomy Week From 21 to 28 September, Britain celebrates its fifth National Astronomy Week. It commemorates the 150th anniversary of the discovery of Neptune, and also coincides with the total (and possibly Mars) might have lunar eclipse and the best view

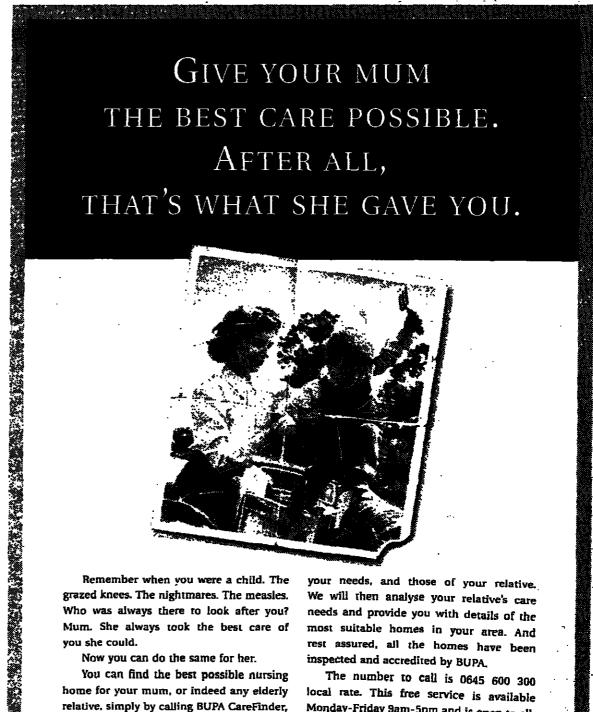

Observatories throughout the UK will be opening their doors to the public, and schools will be coordinating astronomy-based projects. For further information, contact National Astronomy Week, Jodrell Bank Science Centre, Macclesfield, Cheshire, SK11 9DL; phone 01477 571874; fax 01477 571875; World Wide Web http: //www.ast.cam.ac.uk/~naw96/

Diary (all times BST) 4 Sept: 8.07pm moon at last

13 Sept: 0.08am new moon 17 Sept: Mercury at inferior 20 Sept: 12.23pm moon at first

22 Sept: 7pm autumn equinox 26 Sept: Saturn at opposition 27 Sept: 3.51am full moon; 3.19am-1.29am total lunar eclipse

The sky as it will appear at 1 ipm in mid-September

THE INDEPENDENT CROSSWORD By Portia 23 Tends to look for visual imagination (5,3) Entirely Latin version Back-chat from soldiers over separate quarters (8) DOWN For now is low season Person with a talent for colour (7) Brief from the minister's expected (5) You can't see your way round it (5,6) Travelling, I can head East by rail (9) Prompt right to go into evidence (7) Somewhat reduce unusual article inside (6) One Pole's nasty but harmless (11) Able to run conserva-ACROSS 12 Get through to hit the tion body (9) Crew of one's boat asball in (5.4) 16 Sweater I designed so to speak (2,2,4) sembled in Canada (8) Light bar snack? (4.9) Crabby youngster' (6) Soon fit the man out Water tower? (7) for Shakespearian role 18 Demanding to leave Adjusted radio-set to track orbiting planet (5.2.6)without information 20 Re-align badly at-10 Stay to the end of tached bracket (5.4) 19 Criticise one American 21 Jack's present show open air demonstratucking into spicy food tions perhaps (3,3) contains one (5) 11 Austrian pastry's 22 Fuss about society 21 Water-snake in the wrong we're told (5) achieving honours (6) Aegean (5) OPublished by New-gaper Publishing PLC, 1 Canada Square, Canary Wharf, London E14 SDL, and protect at Mirror Colour Print. St Albans Read, Watterd and Hollow and Avenue, Oldbans — Bock (Mice available from H. Montas, 26 August 1986 — Reprinted as a sewspaper with the Part Office.

ಾ

Monday-Friday 9am-5pm and is open to all, not just BUPA members. Your mum only ever wanted the very best for you. Shouldn't you make sure that you give her the same?

eturn this coupon to: Care	Finder, FREEPOST (LON 8477) 300, Grays Inn Road, London WC1X ARR
ame	Address
	Postcode
el.(Day)	(Eve) I would like a BUPA nurse adviser to call me

the free Nursing Home Advisory Service

from BUPA. You'll talk to sympathetic, experienced nurse advisors

who genuinely understand hm from Brus Navi secret The three Cierr who tried and f

 $\{x_i,y_{i+1}\}$

...

Alternative State

Branch . . .

陶an ...

Canal in . . .

TERM

34 miles

Clanden i . .

tion to the

ad Line !!

That excellent they

The EC .h.

Control of the Assessment

QUICKI

Men in dange

^{Patients} at ri

Micailet act

West risk t

lesearch fur

The Concer Res

paign is threatenup

relative reminds in

4g from Car

Treat the met line

See thought

odnikeq pelleri

diwn and prove criminal brich heen Nazis ther